FOR NATIONAL DEFENSE—

Financial Capital of the Air Force

By BRIG. GEN. JOHN R. GILCHRIST,
Director of Finance for the U. S. Air Force

SINCE the official dedication of the Air Force Finance Center on 31 July 1951, the address "3800 York Street, Denver, Colorado" has become very familiar to Air Force personnel and their dependents. It is the "home" of the Air Force Finance Center, often referred to as the "Financial Capital of our global Air Force." The Air Force, its personnel and their dependents rely upon this organization for the efficient and economical administration of their finances.

Brig. Gen. Gilchrist

The Center exercises technical supervision over a world-wide finance network servicing the vast and rapidly growing air power of the nation.

Specifically, a few of its more important functions are accounting for all funds appropriated by Congress for the Air Force, payment of allotments to dependents and to authorized financial institutions, audit of all military pay records and maintenance of a financial history file on each Air Force member, payment of Government life insurance premiums, issuance of Savings Bonds for certain overseas personnel, maintenance of savings accounts for airmen, funding of Air Force disbursing officers throughout the world, settlement of foreign and domestic claims for and against the Air Force, payment to retired Air Force personnel in the continental limits of the United States, and furnishing technical advice to the Air Force operating finance representatives in the field.

The "home" of the Air Force Finance Center is a 32 acre tract in the City of Denver, Colo. It consists of eleven buildings, the two largest each being 180 feet wide and 1,440 feet long. The plant was originally built in 1942 by the Army and used during World War II as a Medical Depot. Early last year, when the Air Force first occupied the property, it was necessary to convert virtually all of it from bare warehouse space to modern office space. The modification job was conducted concurrently with the organization of the Center. Well developed plans and programs coupled with splendid cooperation from within the Air Force and full support from Headquarters United States Air Force contributed materially to a successful activation program. Of equal import was the keen

Greet Army Navy Air Force Journal on 89th Birthday

The Honorable Robert L. Lovett, Secretary of Defense—"For eighty-nine years the Army Navy Air Force Journal has championed national security and zealously devoted itself to the interests of service people. On this anniversary I commend it for its notable contributions to both and wish it continued success."

The Honorable Frank Pace, jr., Secretary of the Army—"Enjoying a special place in the reading habits of Servicemen and women, the Army Navy Air Force Journal has performed a genuine service to military personnel these many years."

"Your accurate news stories and stimulating editorials and features help to keep all us in the Army up-to-date not only about our own Service but the other members of the Armed Forces team as well."

"It is an honor for me to renew my congratulations to the Army Navy Air Force Journal as you start your 89th year of service to the military community and to all the others who look to your columns for factual information about the Armed Forces. I know that the soldiers and civilians everywhere who make up the Department of Army join me in these congratulations."

The Honorable Dan A. Kimball, Secretary of the Navy—"It gives me a great deal of pleasure to congratulate the Army Navy Air Force Journal on its 89th birthday anniversary. Eighty-nine years of keeping service personnel informed on matters of special interest to them is an achievement of which the staff and editors of The Journal may be justifiably proud."

The Honorable Thomas K. Finletter, Secretary of the Air Force—"On your 89th anniversary, sincere good wishes for continuing success. Now, more than ever before, the military services need your splendid support."

General of the Army Omar N. Bradley, Chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff—"The Army Navy Air Force Journal makes a continuing contribution to the comfort and happiness of service men and women by bringing them firsthand news of the Services and their friends."

"We especially appreciate news of assignment changes; births, deaths, and marriages; and explanatory stories on the effect of policy and regulation changes. To service families stationed overseas, it's like a letter from home."

"Congratulations on your 89th Anniversary and best wishes for continued service to the Armed Forces."

General Hoyt S. Vandenberg, Chief of Staff, U. S. Air Force—"May I express my congratulations and best wishes to your staff on the occasion of your 89th anniversary. Over the many years that I have known it, The Journal has always performed excellent and responsible service to the nation's Armed Forces and has merited its prestige among our people."

General J. Lawton Collins, Chief of Staff, U. S. Army—"Again this year I take pleasure in sending congratulations to the Army Navy Air Force Journal upon the occasion of its anniversary. The editor and staff of The Journal have good reason to be proud of its long record of journalistic excellence and splendid service to the Armed Forces. The men and women of the Army join with me in extending our best wishes for your continued success."

Admiral William M. Fechteler, Chief of Naval Operations—"Navy men and women everywhere join me in congratulating the Army Navy Air Force Journal for the 89 years of complete, impartial and sensible reporting of the activities of our Armed Services. I hope that your splendid publication enjoys continued growth in public service, prestige and circulation."

General Lemuel C. Shepherd, jr., Commandant of the Marine Corps—"On behalf of all United States Marines, I am pleased to extend hearty congratulations to you and the members of your staff on the occasion of the 89th anniversary of the founding of the Army Navy Air Force Journal."

"You are the custodian of a proud record of service to the members of the Armed Forces. You have our best wishes for continued success and the further enhancement of that fine reputation."

Vice Adm. Merlin O'Neill, Commandant, U. S. Coast Guard—"Once more it is my pleasure to congratulate The Journal on the completion of another year of faithful service to members of the Armed Forces."

"Since The Journal was established in 1863 it has attained and continued to maintain a high standard of journalism in its particular field. Now it speaks with almost a century of experience in reporting and interpreting events of significance to military and naval personnel."

"Congratulations to you and your fine staff, and my best wishes for your continued success."

List Army First Lts. Waiting Promotions

The disclosure in last week's issue of THE JOURNAL that the Army was preparing to release the names of all officers on recommended lists for temporary promotions was confirmed yesterday, 29 Aug., when the Pentagon made public a list of approximately 2,431 first lieutenants waiting advancement to captain.

The complete list begins on Page 1616 of this issue. Present expectations are that the list of officers recommended for promotion to major will be available for publication next week, to be followed by the eligibles for promotion to lieutenant colonel and colonel.

At the same time, the Army this week announced 49 additional promotions to temporary colonel and 103 to temporary lieutenant colonel.

These 152 advancements mark the completion of the second month of promotions from the long-standing recommended lists. As vacancies and budgetary limitations permit, the Army is making promotions to the grades of captain, major, lieutenant colonel and colonel.

During July, there were 195 promotions to captain, 198 to major, 93 to lieutenant colonel and 49 to colonel—a total of 535.

During August, including the promotions announced this week, there were 385 promotions to captain, 394 to major, 201 to lieutenant colonel and 102 to colonel—a total of 1,082.

Army officials late this week were tabulating strength reports and were preparing for additional officer promotions during September. There is a probability that the number of promotions in September will approximate the August total, but a final determination has not yet been made.

In all officer promotion actions, the Army must be mindful of the restrictions of the Davis Amendment to the 1953 Appropriations Act. Although the percentage limitations of this amendment do not go into effect until April, advance caution is necessary to make certain that orderly procedures can be maintained, notwithstanding the arbitrary ceilings.

THE JOURNAL has said previously that the recommended lists for promotion to captain and major probably will be exhausted by the end of the year. Plans may change but that forecast apparently is still valid.

Of the 49 lieutenant colonels promoted to the temporary rank of captain in Special Orders No. 173, 27 Aug., 44 are Regulars and five are Reserve officers. The cut-off date was 3 June 1943, which compares with a date of 14 May 1943 for the group of 53 colonels, whose promotions were reported in the 16 Aug. issue of THE JOURNAL. The July cut-off date was 19 April 1943, and during the 1951 promotions the cut-off date for promotion

Bunker Hill Held In Face of Red Attacks

DRENCHING rains, mud, haze, and low-hanging clouds greatly hampered military operations in Korea throughout much of this week. The most important ground action during the week occurred in the western sector, where the Chinese Reds made another large-scale, but futile, attempt to scale the slippery slopes of Bunker Hill, east of Panmunjom, and recapture this dominant terrain feature. An enemy battalion fought the United States Marines in an all-night battle, part of the time in hand-to-hand combat, but finally withdrew at daybreak, after suffering heavy losses, leaving the hill still in the firm possession of its defenders.

Elsewhere throughout the long battle-front there was only sporadic action. Patrol contacts were light and infrequent. Enemy mortar and artillery fire was much less intense than in recent weeks, indicating the possibility of a shortage of ammunition, or a conservation of available supplies for later employment.

Adverse weather conditions greatly reduced air operations of both land and carrier planes. All-weather Air Force light and medium bombers made several heavy attacks on enemy installations, dropping their bombs by radar through clouds and heavy overcast. Action by fighter-bombers and patrol planes was held to a minimum by poor flying conditions. Many of the sorties flown were in close support of Allied ground troops. With clearing weather, more than 400 Allied warplanes made one of the heaviest raids of the war on the North Korean capital of Pyongyang on Friday, 29 Aug., causing widespread destruction of military installations.

Visibility Poor

The weather also reduced naval surface bombardment and minesweeper activities. Patrol and blockade warships were on station along both coasts, and occasionally fired at shore targets of opportunity. However, because of poor visibility results were often undetermined. United States Ambassador John Muccio, soon to be transferred from Korea, observed the bombardment of enemy shore positions at Wonsan from the deck of the U. S. Battleship Iowa.

On the western front the principal ground action at Bunker Hill developed after a series of minor thrusts by the enemy at outposts of the 1st U. S. Marine Division on the slopes of the key ridge. The engagement began at 8:40 P.M., on Monday, 25 August, and continued all night until 4:35 the following morning.

The renewed fighting in this area ended a lull of several days, during which the Marines strengthened their prefabricated bunkers and other field fortifications. The first assaults by the Chinese Reds were made by a few squads, then a platoon, and then a company, and subsequently a full-scale attack was made by a reinforced battalion of more than 400 men.

Hand To Hand Contact

At times the fighting was so intense that the opponents were in hand-to-hand contact. By daybreak the Marines had hurled back the attackers and the fighting ceased. During the night-long battle the Communist casualties in killed and wounded were estimated at 270. Marine losses were relatively light, due, at least partially, to their protective armor. The engagement was punctuated by an artillery duel between the Allies and the Reds.

Elsewhere on the western front there were only a few light patrol skirmishes. A small enemy force, attempting to probe an advanced Allied position, west of Yonchon, was driven off in a brief night engagement.

In the central sector an enemy unit attacked an Allied outpost, northeast of Kumwha, at midnight, and was repulsed in a short fight. East of the Pukhan River a Chinese Communist platoon was routed when it made a light attack on an advanced United Nations position.

On the eastern front there was a sharp mid-morning fight between an enemy platoon and a small Allied unit, west of the Mundung-ni Valley. After a fire-fight lasting 45 minutes the Reds were driven back. South of Kosong United Nations raiding parties inflicted numerous casualties on the enemy. Elsewhere in the east Allied patrols encountered several small Red groups and fought brief engagements.

Though the weather greatly slowed Allied naval activity some missions were flown by carrier planes, and surface vessels fired on Red shore installations, despite poor visibility and lack of opportunity to observe results in many cases.

The U. S. Battleship Iowa struck at gun emplacements, rail lines, and supply caves at Kojo, near the eastern end of the land battle line. Air spotters reported that guns, bunkers, supply dumps, and a rail bridge were destroyed or damaged. Many Red troops were killed as one-ton projectiles exploded on impact.

Later the Iowa and the U. S. Destroyer Rupertus moved north to Wonsan, where gun positions and observation posts on Hodo Pando, a peninsula extending into Wonsan harbor, were destroyed. The U. S. Destroyers Rogers and Bausell provided intermittent illumination of enemy shore positions at night during the Wonsan bombardment. Their shellfire drove Red troops from their barracks to the cover of a nearby bridge, where most of them became casualties when that structure was hit.

Bombard Shore Routes

The U. S. Heavy Cruiser Bremerton and the Destroyers Hollister and Tingey fired on shore supply routes north of Kosong, and on enemy shore batteries in the same area. Shells landed on mortar positions, trenches, and bunkers, inflicting numerous casualties. The Tingey also hit trucks moving on the coastal highway north of Kojo.

North of Tanchon, the U. S. Destroyer McDermott fired on two trains, but results were unobserved. The McDermott, with the U. S. Destroyer Boyd and two South Korean torpedo boats, hit rail bridges between Mayang and Songjin. Near Songjin the Boyd captured a Red sampan and made its crew prisoners.

Activity of Allied warships along the west coast was almost negligible, because of dense fog and rain. Minor actions were reported in the Yellow Sea by the U. S. Destroyer Yarnell and the British Frigate Brides Bay. The Australian Destroyer Bataan fired on enemy troops along the approaches to Haeju.

Navy planes from the U. S. Heavy Carrier Boxer, inactive most of the week, made a heavy raid last Thursday on enemy power installations in North Korea.

Radar Air Attacks

While particularly poor flying weather greatly reduced operations of land planes of the Far East Air Force, especially during the first part of the week, the light and medium bombers braved clouds and rains to make radar-directed night attacks on enemy installations. Allied fighters and fighter-bombers were grounded during much of the week, but whenever possible advantage was taken of clearing weather to make concentrated close air support strikes against enemy front-line positions.

American B-26 light bombers made a heavy night attack on a big Red supply center near Pukchon, 15 miles inland from the Sea of Japan in Northeast Korea, on the main line leading to the Siberian border. When the planes completed their runs the base was a mass of flames.

Another group of B-26s hit a supply dump south of Kadong, 30 miles north of the Communist capital of Pyongyang. Other light bombers dropped explosives on Communist troops along the battle line. Still others joined with shore-based Marine fighter-bombers to patrol enemy supply routes, attacking and destroying a number of Red trucks. Secondary explosions were observed when a flight of B-26s hit a supply area at Yangdok.

All-weather B-29 medium bombers, based in Japan and Okinawa, executed attack missions nightly, despite multi-layered clouds and storms. The marshalling yard at Sunpung-dong, only one mile from the northern border of North Korea at the Yalu River, was hit by high explosives dropped by Superforts. Other medium bombers hit supply areas in the north-west section of Pyongyang, and a marshalling yard at Chinnampo. They also flew a number of close support missions at the battle line in aid of Allied ground troops.

Close Support Sorties

Most of the fighter-bombers flew a limited number of close support sorties. F-84 Thunder Jets silenced several gun positions near Kansong on the east coast. F-80 Shooting Stars made a number of rail cuts in the main supply route between Sukchon and Pyongyang. Marine-fighter-bombers severely damaged a rail bridge between Haeju and Yonan. Marine planes also gave close support to Allied ground troops. F-86 Sabre Jets, grounded most of the week, flew some protective cover missions for fighter-bombers.

In its summary of operations for the week ending 22 Aug. the Far East Air Force announced that during that period 4,120 effective sorties were flown, a number considerably reduced below normal by adverse weather conditions. During last week relatively few enemy MIGs were encountered. However, three were shot down and six were damaged by American F-86 Sabre Jets in air battles high over Northwest Korea. No Far East Air Force planes were lost last week in air combat, but one Marine AD-2 and one South African F-51 Mustang were shot down by enemy ground fire, and two F-86s, one F-84, and one AD-2 were lost to other causes.

During the seven-day period ending 22 Aug., Far East Air Force planes destroyed or damaged more than 300 buildings, 170 bunkers, 55 vehicles, 100 gun positions, 10 ammunition and supply dumps, five fuel dumps, and five supply shelters. In addition 15 rail and highway cuts were made, and 85 troop casualties were inflicted.

Aircraft Losses Told

Combat losses of enemy planes of all types during the war are estimated at 555 destroyed, 143 probably destroyed, and 620 damaged, for a total of 1,318. Losses of planes of the Far East Air Force and attached units in combat now total 753.

During the period of the conflict aircraft of the Far East Air Force and attached units have flown 554,360 sorties, and have destroyed 56,615 vehicles, 8,440 rail cars, 762 bridges, 1,258 tanks, and 917 tunnels. In addition they have inflicted 177,085 troop casualties. This summary of losses and damage claims covers only the Far East Air Force and attached Marine and foreign units, and does not include operations of American and Allied carrier planes.

Casualty Report

The Defense Department this week announced that American battle casualties from the start of the Korean war, to include notifications to next of kin through 22 Aug., now total 116,252, an increase of 869 over last week's report. Of these 20,411 were killed in action or died of wounds; 85,398 were wounded in action, including 1,908 who died; and 12,653 missing in action, including 202 who died, 1,387 returned to military duty, and 1,611 captured, leaving 9,453 currently missing.

Of the total casualties 93,165 were sustained by the Army, 1,518 by the Navy, 20,326 by the Marine Corps, and 1,243 by the Air Force.

Combat Pay Fact Sheet

The Department of Defense on 26 Aug. released another in a series of fact sheet releases on Combat Duty Pay.

Herewith is the text of the Department's latest statement:

Uniform regulations governing the payment of combat duty pay, as authorized by the Combat Duty Pay Act of 1952, have been in effect in the Army, the Navy, the Air Force and the Marine Corps since 11 August 1952, when they were approved by Secretary of Defense Robert A. Lovett.

Initial payments under the provisions of these regulations will be made during the month of August to personnel now in the armed forces.

To avoid misinterpretation of the regulations, a team of officers is now in Korea aiding administrative and finance officers in implementing the regulations. In addition, the military services have printed the regulations in the Far East, distributed them, and invited questions concerning them.

The Combat Duty Pay Act of 1952 provides for combat pay at the rate of $45 per month for all members and former members of the Army, Navy, Air Force, Marine Corps and Coast Guard for combat service in the Korean Combat Zone after 31 May 1950.

Service in Korea does not necessarily entitle an individual to combat pay. To be entitled to combat pay, an individual must be engaged in combat pay.

Pentagon Releases Data On Reserve Appointments

The Pentagon this week released information concerning indefinite appointments for Reserve officers of the Army and Air Force.

The complete text of the Department of Defense statement, which affects scores of thousands of officers, is published herewith.

The action marks a major step in the implementation of provisions of the Armed Forces Reserve Act.

It can be expected that the Services will soon release greater details concerning the indefinite appointments.

The text of the 27 Aug. announcement follows:

Reserve officers and warrant officers of the Army now serving on active duty will be offered indefinite appointments in the Army Reserve immediately, the Department of Defense has announced.

Indefinite appointments will be offered to Air Force officers at an early date, in all cases prior to 1 July 1953.

Army Reserve officers not on active duty will be offered their indefinite appointments later, but prior to 1 July 1953.

These are the first actions to put into operation provisions of the Armed Forces Reserve Act of 1952, for tendering indefinite term appointments to officers and warrant officers of the Army and Air Force who on 9 July 1952 held definite term appointments.

Appointment will be in the individual's permanent Reserve grade. Those serving in higher or lower temporary grades will continue to serve on active duty in those grades.

Navy Reserve, Marine Corps Reserve, National Guard, and Air National Guard officers' appointments are already on an indefinite term basis and therefore are not affected by the Act. Reserve Officers of the Coast Guard are affected, but will be governed by regulations issued by the Secretary of the Treasury.

To expedite the program, no physical examinations will be required and only the individual's acceptance in writing and execution of an oath of office are necessary.

Current 5-year appointments of Reserve officers which have been extended by law and Presidential Executive Orders are due to expire on 28 October 1952. Should the President issue another such Executive Order, which has been authorized by Congress, these appointments would expire 1 April 1953.

Individuals whose current appointments will continue for several years under the 5-year term also are included in the program, and will be afforded an opportunity to convert to the new indefinite term appointment.

No estimate of the number of Army Reserve and warrant officers who will immediately be offered indefinite appointments is now available, but it is anticipated that a majority of those serving on active duty are affected.

Letters of notification of eligibility, which include the tender of appointment, will be forwarded to personnel of the Army who are concerned. They will be requested to reply within 60 days after receipt indicating acceptance or other intentions.

Those who decline to accept a new indefinite term appointment will continue to serve under their current appointment as extended by law or until its normal date of expiration, whichever is later, unless sooner released from active duty.

The Army has announced that the resignation of a Reserve officer or warrant officer who declines in writing to accept an indefinite term appointment will be accepted effective upon his release from active duty, provided he has an additional reserve obligation under the UMT&S Act, as amended, and he has held an appointment as a Reserve officer for a 5-year term.

Regulations pertaining to active duty agreements for stipulated periods of time, not to exceed 5 years, as provided by law, are expected to be issued at an early date. It is contemplated that only personnel holding indefinite term appointments will be eligible to enter such agreements.

Information on additional provisions of the Armed Forces Reserve Act will become available from time to time as soon as the necessary preliminary action is completed.

Commands Wing Near Tokyo

Assignment of Col. Fred D. Stevers as commanding officer of the 6161st Air Base Wing near Tokyo is announced by Brig. Gen. Delmar T. Spivey, USAF, Japan Air Defense Force commander.

Prior to his present assignment, Colonel Stevers commanded the 4702nd Air Defense Wing at Hamilton AFB, Calif.

JLC Engineer Supply Chief

Col. John D. McElbeny has been named supply chief of the Engineer section of Japan Logistical Command.

Fly TAF Reports Sweeping Changes In Pilot Training

Complete revamping of the Air Force pilot training program to increase training given each student and at the same time reduce cost to taxpayers will begin in mid-November, Flying Training Air Force headquarters announces.

Three major changes characterize the new system:

1. The pre-flight phase of training will double from six to 12 weeks and will be administered by Technical Training Air Force (TechTAF). FlyTAF and TechTAF both are components of Air Training Command.

2. Flying time will increase to 145 hours, but in the same 24-week span as the present 130-hour course.

3. Light, low-powered aircraft will be used in the first six weeks of the flying phase instead of the standard high-powered T-6.

The three major changes in the primary phase of training, the first course students receive. In the basic phase, where students learn to fly combat aircraft, flying time has been reduced from 135 to 120 hours.

Officials said of the 120 hours, 80 will be in combat aircraft and 40 in trainers. Under the present system, students fly 65 hours in combat planes and 70 in trainers.

At the same time the new program starts FlyTAF will increase its yearly production of pilots from approximately 7,000 to approximately 10,000 in keeping with recent authorization by Congress for expansion of the Air Force to 143 wings.

Officials said the program will help counteract the dollar waste of eliminating students found deficient after they have completed a large portion of the course.

Lt. Col. W. L. Reynolds, chief of FlyTAF's primary training division, said the new program will eliminate a bulk of the students before they enter the more expensive T-6 flying phase.

Some will be dropped for academic reasons during the 12-week pre-flight course and more will drop out for flying reasons—fear of flying, flying sickness and others which instructors detect early—during the relatively inexpensive light-plane phase.

Colonel Reynolds said cost of flying the light plane is approximately one-fourth the cost of flying the 600-horsepower T-6.

He said using light planes for the first six weeks of flying also may help reduce the costly elimination rate because before flying the T-6 students will have started their flying careers in a slower and far less complex aircraft.

Nine of the 10 FlyTAF primary schools are operated by civilians under contract with the Air Force.

To the contractors the new program means they must purchase the light planes according to specifications of FlyTAF headquarters, hire more instructors and provide separate flying fields for the light-plane phase.

The aircraft contractors selected for the training is made by Piper Aircraft Corporation. It is a standard commercial type, 90-horsepower plane designed similar to the T-6 so graduation from the light plane to the heavier one will be easier, officials said.

Under the present system a class of student pilots enters training every six weeks at each of FlyTAF's 10 primary flying schools. Officials said of an approximate 600 students at each base only about 475 are flying students.

The new program will remove non-flying students from FlyTAF bases by giving all cadets the 12-week pre-flight course at Lackland AFB, San Antonio, which is under TechTAF jurisdiction.

With the yearly pilot output increase there will be approximately 520 flying students, all pre-flight graduates, at each of the 10 bases. Cadets who enter pre-flight at Lackland AFB in mid-November will arrive at FlyTAB bases in mid-February.

Under the present program, FlyTAF students fly approximately 155,000 hours every six weeks at all of the 10 bases combined. When the new program begins they will fly approximately 193,000 hours.

Hazard Pay Study

Final arrangements are being made at the Secretary of Defense level for the naming of the civilian commission to study the problem of incentive and hazard pay, as requested by the Senate Armed Services Committee.

The commission probably will begin its work next month.

Meantime, the New York Herald Tribune this week published an editorial on "The Military Hazard," as follows:

"In a ghastly maneuver error near Eglin Field, Fla., the pilot of a Sabrejet interceptor mistook a guide plane for the unmanned 'drone' target it was controlling and blew the former, with its eight-man crew, to pieces in the air. The interceptor pilot seems to have picked up the wrong plane on his radar (which could not distinguish between the two) and then turned the problem over to the robot operation of electronics, which put a rocket into the supposed target with remorseless accuracy. Two survivors were recovered yesterday; but the tragedy still stands as an example of the terrible deadliness of modern weapons, of the narrow tolerances on which the men who handle and operate them must live even under rear-area and training conditions and of the reasons why matters of hazard pay are so bitterly debated within the services.

"Apparently, this accident was just 'one of those things'—inevitable when young men must ride giant blowtorches at near-sonic speeds, at the same time managing tons of the deadliest and most intricately controlled explosives with split-second reactions. Training accidents are lamentably frequent in the Air Force, and none who has ever happened to see one will grudge the active pilots their hazard pay. Yet the problem is an intricate one.

"A ground colonel in Korea gets $45 a month extra while he is in combat, but an Air Force colonel gets $210 a month flying pay, though his duty never takes him out of the United States and his flying is seldom of the hazardous kind. In the condition of half-war which we must accept as the normal for years to come, the equalization of the military obligation and risk (which all male citizens must bear) is not easy. At least, we are beginning to realize that the problem exists."

First Budget Estimates Due Next Week, Possible Difficulties Already Foreseen

Coincidental with the scheduled consideration next week of initial fiscal '54 budget estimates from the Services, speculation is growing among Pentagon observers that there will be considerable dispute before the final budget is sent to Congress—and possibly even after.

In an effort to keep any inter-Services and Department of Defense-Bureau of the Budget disagreements "within the family," top Pentagon officials have issued strong precautions against disclosure of any difficulties which may develop over allocation of funds.

However, there are obvious factors which indicate that the fiscal year 1954 military budget is likely to be particularly controversial.

Here is how the problem will shape up in broad outline as regards the various Services:

AIR FORCE—Its officials are greatly concerned over the possibility of a "reprogramming" which might prevent the achievement of the 143-wing Air Force, for which the 82d Congress voted funds. The Air Force, it is recalled, was given $21.1 billion for the current fiscal year, compared with $12.2 for the Army and $12.8 for the Navy.

There is no question but that Air Force leaders would resist with vocal energy any attempts to restore the defense budget to a more "proportional" basis.

Significant was the fact that the last Congress, while reducing the President's original military budget by $4.7 billion, gave the Air Force the smallest percentage reduction. The Army budget was reduced by $2.1 billion, the Navy by $1.1 billion and the Air Force by $1.4 billion.

That the Air Force recognizes the possibility of a slow-down of its expansion program was pointed up yesterday, 29 Aug., by Under Secretary Roswell L. Gilpatric.

In an address to the Air Force Association Convention in Detroit, Under Secretary Gilpatric warned that the greatest peril to the Air Force and to the

Perm. Cols'. Retention

The board of retired general officers which has been considering the records of approximately 1,000 Army permanent colonels facing retirement in 1953 and 1954 has completed its assignment.

The Air Force, which has approximately 50 permanent colonels slated for 1953 retirement, about a third of them serving in higher temporary grades, once again this week declined to confirm or deny a report that all of these officers have received letters that they are to be retired.

The Army, it is expected, will retain close to the 60 per cent limitation on the number of permanent colonels who may be retained under authority granted in an Executive Order.

The report of the special Army board, headed by General Wade H. Haislip, USA-Ret., probably will be reviewed by Secretary of the Army Frank Pace, Jr., early in September. Then immediately after the report is approved, each officer will be notified whether he is to be retained or retired.

The Air Force officially has said consideration would be given to retention only of those permanent colonels serving in higher temporary grades, but it has now been learned that some, if not all, of the temporary general officers already have received notification that they are to be retired.

Pensions Pamphlet

The Government Printing Office announces publication of a 26-page pamphlet on Compensation or Pension to Veterans on Their Dependents, available from the Superintendent of Documents, GPO, Washington 25, D. C., at a cost of 20 cents.

The booklet, which has a Catalog No. Y 4.V 64/3:C73/5/952, gives an analysis of elements of entitlement to and rates of compensation or pension as of 1 Aug. 1952. Included are monthly rates of compensation and pension, rules of eligibility, definitions, and other pertinent information for war and peacetime veterans and their dependents.

Navy to Reduce Lt's; Cut Three Other Ranks

The Navy will demote a "substantial number" of its lieutenants, cut promotions to commander by about 40 per cent of planned figures, drop promotions to lieutenant commander by an even greater number, and release some USNR captains and commanders to inactive duty as a result of the Davis amendment to the 1953 Appropriations Bill.

The "most critical effect" of the amendment, the Navy said this week, will occur in the grade of lieutenant. "Not only will there be no promotions to this grade, but a substantial number of lieutenants will have to be reverted to the grade of lieutenant junior grade in order to comply with the provisions of the rider."

Although no specific figures were released for the planned reductions in rank, the Navy said "officers who were recently promoted to the grade of lieutenant" will suffer most. This could mean that upwards of 5,000 officers would suffer reversions in rank since the Navy has "recently promoted" 3,220 Line officers and 1,777 Staff Corps officers to the rank of lieutenant. These figures include both Regulars and Reserves on active duty, and some of the latter may since have been released to inactive duty.

The JOURNAL learned from the Bureau of Personnel that some USNR captains and commanders will be released to inactive duty. Again, no definite numbers have been decided upon, but those who have completed their obligated tours of duty and who have asked for extensions will be considered for release.

Reductions in March

Both the reductions to lieutenant (jg) and the release of USNR officers will probably not be made until late March, since the Davis Amendment does not become effective until the final three months of the fiscal year. No announcement was made to this effect by the Navy, but the amendment was bitterly opposed by Navy personnel heads during Congressional hearings, and testimony was offered at that time to show that the restrictions imposed by the amendment would not give the Navy adequate numbers of officers to meet its requirements. For this reason, it is believed by observers that the Navy will not force reductions or releases of personnel until the deadline date arrives.

The amendment will have these effects on Navy grades:

Rear Admiral—Permits 256. "Will have no effect upon promotions" to this grade, the Navy said.

Captain—Permits 2,986. "It will not limit the number of promotions to the grade of captain, but will delay the effective dates of these promotions." (See earlier JOURNAL story, page 1551, issue of 16 Aug.)

Commander—Permits 7,071. The number of promotions "will be reduced to about 40 per cent of that planned." Effective dates of promotions will be delayed "about five months."

Lt. Commander—Permits 10,814. "A proportionally greater reduction in the number of promotions to the grade of lieutenant commander will occur." A spokesman told THE JOURNAL this number will be in excess of 40 per cent, but less than 50 per cent.

Lieutenants—Permits 22,126.

Lieutenants (jg)—No promotions will be made from this grade. The Navy said it had planned to promote about 1,500 lieutenants (jg), but that these plans have been abandoned.

In stating the effects of the amendment on promotions, the Navy said the restrictive effect "centers on the grade of lieutenant largely because it is in this grade that the bulk of the experienced Naval Reserve officers are found who were available for vital active duty service during the present emergency. However, the arbitrary provisions of the rider operate to limit the total number of the commissioned officers in a grade without consideration for the Reserve officers on active duty."

The Navy said, "Within existing provisions of law, promotions to higher

Army Orders Body Armor for Troops in Korea

The Army has ordered Marine Corps body armor, developed by the Navy, for use by combat troops in Korea.

A Department of Defense announcement on 22 Aug. said the action is being taken "to provide maximum protection of troops in Korea and to permit further field and production development of the new Army experimental nylon body armor."

The Army Quartermaster Corps has arranged with the Marine Corps to secure for immediate delivery to the Far East 25,000 body armor equipment.

The Pentagon said that combat experience in Korea has established that both the Army and Marine Corps body armor "are extremely effective against fragments of mortar shells, hand grenades and other types of low-velocity missiles which cause the majority of battlefield wounds."

"Both types of armor are designed to protect the upper torso and are the results of research by the Navy and Army, including the exchange of experimental models and test data."

The announcement added: "The Marine Corps body armor, developed by the Navy Bureau of Medicine and Surgery, and utilizing rigid fiberglass plates curved to fit the contours of the body, is standard equipment for the Marine Corps and has been in production on a volume basis since October 1951."

"The Army-type body armor made of 12 layers of flexible, spot-laminated nylon duck, was developed by the Army and has been produced thus far only on a limited experimental basis."

"The Army has decided to procure the Marine body armor for issue to troops now in Korea because of its immediate availability from industry on a quantity basis."

"The Army will continue limited procurement of its experimental nylon body armor to support field tests begun with an initial delivery of 1,400 vests last February and to develop volume production techniques in cooperation with industry. After full field testing and standardization, it is estimated that the Army-type armor could be produced on a quantity basis at a price comparable to the Marine body armor."

"Cooperative research will be continued by the Armed Services to standardize a single type of body armor which will incorporate the advantages of both present types."

New Post for Gen. Grow

Maj. Gen. Robert W. Grow has been assigned to the office of the Army's Chief of Military History at Washington, D. C., the Army announced on 28 Aug.

General Grow's new assignment is effective 2 Sept. He has been on duty at Headquarters, Second Army, at Fort George G. Meade, Md., since January 1952, following his return from duty as U. S. Military Attache in Moscow.

USMA Grid Outlook

The U. S. Military Academy will open its 1952 football season at Michie Stadium, West Point, N. Y., on 27 Sept., against South Carolina. The remainder of the schedule is as follows:

Oct. 4 USC at Los Angeles
" 11 Dartmouth
" 18 Pittsburgh
" 25 Columbia at New York City
Nov. 1 V. M. I.
" 8 Ga. Tech at Atlanta
" 15 Penn. at Phila.
" 29 Navy at Phila.

A pre-season brochure from the Academy gives the following outlook for the coming season:

An over-powering schedule plus a dearth of experienced players in several positions makes Army's task most difficult.

The schedule is highlighted by four inter-sectional games with South Carolina, Southern California, Pittsburgh and Georgia Tech, interspersed with major Eastern opposition from Dartmouth, Columbia, VMI, Pennsylvania and Navy.

Of the twenty-two lettermen returned from the '51 squad that won 2 and lost 7, three were guards, five tackles, three ends, six offensive and five defensive backs.

The team lacks experienced personnel at left end, left guard, right tackle and left and right halfbacks on defense. On offense the picture is a little brighter with lettermen back at every position with the exception of center and right guard.

To help alleviate the situation, Coach Earl (Red) Blaik switched Ronald Lincoln, and Lowell Sisson, defensive ends, to tackle and halfback, respectively, on defense. Godwin Ordway, another end, was transferred to center on offense.

This is a predominantly sophomore-junior squad. The actual breakdown is 8 seniors, 29 juniors, and 17 sophs. Plebes are not eligible. Only one of the present squad has had more than one year of college football. He is Ed Weaver, end. All the rest either have had no varsity experience or played last year for the first time.

The attacking backfield appears to be the strongest part of the squad. Principal hold-overs are Tommy Bell, John Wing, Freddie Attaya and Freddie Meyers.

Meyers is undoubtedly the outstanding back. He was a T-quarterback last fall, but was shifted to left halfback during spring practice to utilize his running and receiving ability. He broke his leg in the late stages of the spring drills, but is being counted on for fulltime duty.

Pete Vann, a yearling, who saw only limited service behind Meyers and Dick Boyle, looks like the logical choice as Meyers' successor in view of progress in the passing department.

Two linemen stand out above the others; namely, Leroy Lunn, a guard from Spring Valley, Illinois, and Bob Guidera, a tackle from Westbury, N. Y. Lunn is a brother of Bob, who also played guard on Army's 1948 and '49 squads. Guidera did not play in the spring due to a knee operation. Nevertheless, he is still regarded as a fine tackle prospect in view of his performance a year ago.

A major change in the coaching staff is noted. Carney Laslie, highly regarded line coach, succeeded Murray Warmath. Laslie formerly coached at Kentucky under Paul Bryant. In addition to Laslie, Coach Blaik has recalled former pupils Joe Steffy, Bobby Dobbs and Art Gerometta, all regular Army officers who will be on detached service for the duration of the football season.

Army-Navy Telecast

The Army-Navy football game on 29 Nov. at Philadelphia, Pa., is included in a list of games to be telecast under sponsorship of General Motors on 11 consecutive Saturdays beginning on 20 Sept.

The games will be carried on the coast-to-coast television network of the National Broadcasting Company. The schedule:

Sept. 20—Texas Christian vs. Kansas at Lawrence, Kans.
Sept. 27—Columbia vs. Princeton at New York.
Oct. 4—Stanford vs. Michigan at Stanford.
Oct. 11—Michigan State vs. Texas A. and M. at East Lansing, Mich.
Nov. 29—Army vs. Navy at Philadelphia.

Army Has Plans for Combat 'Copter Battalions

Under Secretary of the Army Karl R. Bendetsen disclosed yesterday that the Army's helicopter transport companies "will undoubtedly be organized into battalions assigned to field armies."

In an illuminating report on "The Army Stake In Air Power," delivered before the annual reunion of the Air Force Association in Detroit, Under Secretary Bendetsen said the Army now has three helicopter transport companies and has programmed seven more—all eventually to be equipped with 21 cargo and two utility helicopters per company.

He said that later these companies will be organized into battalions for facilitation of control and administration.

Mr. Bendetsen said "the Army is today short of all types of helicopters," and added that "this shortage is most acute in the case of cargo helicopters of which we have received delivery of less than one-tenth of the total funded."

To the aviation audience at Detroit, Mr. Bendetsen made these additional points:

1. The Army now has in use about 2000 aircraft with several hundred more on order. Seven branches have aircraft in their tables of equipment—Infantry, Armor, Artillery, Engineers, Signal, Transportation and Medical.

2. There is no difficulty in obtaining pilots, with a current backlog of more than 700 approved applicants.

3. Since Korea, Congress has appropriated more than $200 million for procurement of Army aircraft and "this program is destined to expand even further as the Army becomes more and more dependent on short-haul aircraft to supplement and replace road-bound wheeled vehicles."

4. The Army is "not completely satisfied with assault aircraft from which airborne units enter combat. Desired is 'expedited development' of the convertiplane."

Commenting on the fact that the Army is the "heaviest customer of airpower of any of the three Services," Under Secretary Bendetsen said:

"The Army recognizes that the primary efforts of the Air Force and of the Naval air arm must of necessity be directed toward the development and procurement of combat aircraft. Nevertheless, the Army, as the primary customer for airlift, must continue to press for the transport aircraft needed to meet its requirements, both quantitatively and qualitatively. The Army considers it essential that the limited air transport of our Armed Services be backed by an ample civil air fleet, equipped with aircraft which are readily adaptable to military use in the event of war."

Guided Missile Group C.O.

Lt. Col. Oren Swain has been named new commanding officer of the 1st Guided Missile Group, Ft. Bliss, Tex.

Colonel Swain was slated to come to Fort Bliss in 1950 for duty with Guided Missiles, but the Korean conflict interfered. Before the Bliss assignment materialized, he was alerted and ordered to Korea where he spent 15 months. He served with X Corps Artillery and took part in the Inchon Landing in September 1950. Returning to the United States late in 1951, he was post executive at the Army War College, Carlisle Barracks, Pa., until his transfer to Fort Bliss.

Flight Pay Certificates

Air Force finance officers have been cautioned that a number of officers are certifying their own flight certificates. Regulations state that "the certificate will be certified by the commanding officer or by an officer delegated by him; however, if the certifying officer is a claimant for flight pay, the flight certificate will also be signed by another officer having knowledge of the facts."

When you move, notify the Army Navy Air Force Journal of your change of address so you will not miss any issues.

Three Bulls fed in a field together in the greatest of peace and amity. A Lion had long watched them in the hope of making a prize of them, but found that there was little chance for him so long as they kept all together. He therefore began secretly to spread evil and slanderous reports of one against the other, till he had fomented a jealousy and distrust amongst them. No sooner did the Lion see that they avoided one another, and fed each by himself apart, than he fell upon them singly, and so made an easy prey of them all.

Sec'y. Predicts New Atomic-Powered Carrier

The next Forrestal-class carrier approved by Congress may be powered by atomic energy, Navy Secretary Dan A. Kimball said this week.

Speaking at the annual convention of the American Legion in New York City on 28 Aug., Mr. Kimball said the contract for a large atomic power plant has already been awarded by the Navy, and it is planned to use the engine "for carrier propulsion." He said he hoped "the third or fourth vessel of the Forrestal class will be atomic powered."

Two such ships, both of 59,900-tons, have already been approved by Congress and the first of these, the USS Forrestal, is now under construction at the Newport News Shipbuilding and Drydock Co., Newport News, Va.

Secretary Kimball has previously said the Navy will ask Congress for "at least one" ship of this class every year for the next ten years. This week, he added that he believes "we need four of these carriers under construction at this very moment." He said, "Two of these ships are not enough. We are going to ask the Congress for more of them."

Discussing other developments in the Navy, Mr. Kimball said "most of the vessels" built during World War II have been modernized and that the program of modernization is continuing along with the Navy's "modest program of new construction." He noted, too, that "Great advances have been made in the development of guided missiles and in the field of ordnance generally. Sixty per cent of all the ordnance items now being bought are entirely new developments since the end of World War II."

In the aviation field, Secretary Kimball said "we have several planes now coming into production which can out-perform the best planes known to be in the hands of those who oppose our way of life."

U. S. NAVY & MARINE CORPS

Assign Flag Officers

Five Navy flag officers have been assigned to new duties. They are Rear Admirals Walter E. Moore, Henry Crommelin, Marshall R. Greer, Victor D. Long and Frederick Moosbrugger.

Both Admirals Crommelin and Long were only recently promoted to flag rank under interim appointments. Admiral Crommelin, formerly on the Joint Staff, CINCPac, will become Assistant Chief of Naval Operations for Personnel. He is the brother of Rear Adm. John G. Crommelin, USN-Ret.

Admiral Long, now assigned to the Office of Naval Operations, will take command of Destroyer Flotilla Three.

Admiral Moore, also assigned to Naval Operations, will go to the Amphibious Group, Pacific Fleet.

Admiral Greer, Commandant of the 10th Naval District and the Caribbean Sea Frontier, will become Chief of Navy Technical Training, at the Naval Air Station, Memphis.

Admiral Moosbrugger, who commands Cruiser Division Five, will become Commanding Officer, Military Sea Transportation Service, Pacific Area and Navy Control of Shipping Officer, San Francisco.

Duty at Makalapa

Comdr. Robert H. Loving, DC, USN, and Lt. Theodore J. H. Rinck, DC, USN, recently reported to the Headquarters of Commander Service Force, U. S. Pacific Fleet, for duty at the Makalapa Dispensary at Pearl Harbor.

Commander Loving became Senior Dental Officer, relieving Comdr. Richard C. Shaw. Lieutenant Rinck is the Assistant Dental Officer. Both officers reported to Pearl Harbor from the National Naval Medical Center, Bethesda, Md., where they were under instruction at the Naval Dental School.

Keep up with your friends by reading the Army Navy Air Force Journal each week.

New Uniforms for Women

The Marine Corps held a Washington fashion show this week to exhibit six new uniforms which have been designed by Mainbocher for the Women Marines.

Details about two of the new uniforms, a summer dress and jacket of dacron and a dress blue suit, were carried in the 7 June issue of THE JOURNAL.

This week it was learned that all other uniforms for Women Marines will be changed as present stocks are exhausted. The new styles include a three-piece formal ensemble for officers of field grade, a new pale green blouse, and a newly-designed overcoat, in addition to the new dress blue uniform and the summer outfit of dacron.

Navy Refueling System

Successful development of an in-flight refueling system for carrier based aircraft was announced by the Navy this week.

The new technique is modeled after the British "drogue and prob" method. The fighter pilot flies his aircraft, equipped with a refueling lance, to engage a probe in a funnel device fastened at the end of the hose on a "tanker" aircraft. Pilot techniques employed are relatively simple, with no more than one "check-out" flight required.

North American AJ Savages, modified for use as "tanker" aircraft, are in production. Various Navy carrier fighters are being equipped with refueling equipment. Aircraft used in the development work included two now in service use in Korea, the Grumman F9F Panther and the McDonnell F2H Banshee.

Tanker models of the AJ will carry the extra fuel and equipment in the bomb-bay.

Tactical advantages to be gained by mid-air refueling of relatively short-range fighters are considerable, the Navy said. Long-range offensive missions, made up of carrier-based attack and bomber aircraft, can be escorted all the way to and from target areas. Combat air patrols can be maintained continuously for long periods, cancelling former frequent launching and retrieving requirements by the carrier task force. Armament loads could be considerably increased.

Medal of Honor of Ceremony

The nation's highest award, the Congressional Medal of Honor, awarded posthumously to the late Pfc. Edward Gomez, who smothered a grenade to save his comrades, was delivered to his mother, Mrs. Modesto Gomez, during simple but impressive ceremonies on a recent Sunday morning in the church of Our Lady of Guadalupe, Omaha, Nebr., by Brig. Gen. Verne J. McCaul, then Commander, Marine Air Reserve Training, who traveled from his headquarters at the Naval Air Station, Glenview, Ill., with staff members to officiate.

Many high dignitaries of the church, civilian and military, including honor delegations from Omaha's Marine Corps League, The American Legion, and the Veterans of Foreign Wars, were on hand to pay homage to the Marine hero, along with some 35 members of the Gomez family, including the father and mother, and seven of Edward's eleven brothers and sisters.

The Gomez family had reason to be proud of Edward, for by some unexplainable premonition, the courageous Marine had felt that death awaited him on his next patrol on the Korean battlefield. He wrote in his last letter: Dearest Mom:

"I am writing this on the possibility that I may die in this next assault. You will hear about it before getting this letter and I hope you don't take it too hard. I am not sorry I died, because I died fighting for my country and that's the Number One thing in everyone's life, to keep his home and country from being won over by such things as communism. I want you to know and believe what I say."

"I am very proud to have done what little I have done to keep my honor free . . . be proud of me, Mom, because even though I'm scared now, I know what I'm doing is worth it."

"Tell Dad I died like the man he wanted me to be. I hope this doesn't break your heart Mom—I love you!"

"The kids, remind them of me once in awhile and never forget, kids, fight only for what you believe in—that's what I'm fighting for."

"All my undying love."

"Babe."

grades must be continued in order to reduce to the greatest possible extent the number of reversions from lieutenant to lieutenant (jg)."

Vice Admiral Laurance T. DuBose, Chief of Naval Personnel has said the concept of the Davis Amendment is one "which can result only in complete disruption of orderly administration, promotion and distribution of officer personnel with attendant damaging lowering of morale among officers of the armed services." He declared that the ceilings imposed by the measure "clamp on controls that ignore the intimate facts of requirements and careers."

Admiral DuBose said the Navy would require 344 officers in the rank of rear admiral by 30 June 1953 (the amendment permits only 256); 3,033 in the grade of captain (2,986 are permitted); 6,975 in the rank of commander (a slightly larger number, 7,071, is permitted in this grade); 13,049 in the rank of lieutenant commander (the amendment permits only 10,814); 21,750 in the rank of lieutenant (22,126 are permitted).

DFC for 'Copter Pilots

The two Air Rescue Service pilots who flew Sikorsky H-19 helicopters from Westover AFB, Mass., to Wiesbaden, Germany—a distance of 3,465 nautical miles—have been awarded the Distinguished Flying Cross.

The medals were presented on 27 Aug. at a Pentagon ceremony to Capt. Vincent H. McGovern and 1st Lt. Harold W. Moore by General Hoyt S. Vandenberg, USAF, Chief of Staff.

On the longest leg of the flight, from Keflavik, Iceland, to Prestwick, Scotland, the existing international distance mark for helicopters of 703.6 miles was broken by more than 200 miles. Three times unfavorable weather forced the crews to turn back on the leg from Goose Bay, Labrador, to Greenland. The fourth attempt, 27 July, was successful.

Captain McGovern resides at 2103 Belvedere Drive, Silver Spring, Md. He flew with the Third Air Rescue Squadron in Korea.

Lieutenant Moore, who flew 112 rescue missions in Korea as a helicopter pilot, is stationed at West Palm Beach International Airport, Fla.

The citation reads:
"By their skill and fortitude these two officers demonstrated the feasibility and practicability of ferrying H-19 helicopters across long over-water routes. Captain McGovern and Lieutenant Moore, in successfully completing this historic flight, have reflected great credit upon themselves and the U. S. Air Force."

U. S. AIR FORCE

AF Hits the Line

The Air Force is disturbed at the loss of manpower hours resulting from waiting in line for renewal of commissary, theater and exchange permit cards. It's estimated that the cost of renewing commissary permits alone may be as high as $500,000.

Commanders have been told that preparing of renewal cards in advance is saving much of the waiting at some bases. A typist working from a list or card file, rather than from the applicant's old card, is able to put out about 100 per cent more cards.

Air Force inspectors have been alerted to reduce or eliminate costly and unnecessary waiting lines that exist during duty hours.

Salute To Services

The opening day of the Fifth Annual International Aviation Exposition at the Detroit-Wayne Major Airport, Mich., will be "Salute to the Air Force Day." On this day, 30 Aug., all Air Force personnel in uniform will be admitted free of charge.

Senior officer for military participation in the Air Exposition as appointed by the Department of Defense is Maj. Gen. Harry A. Johnson, USAF, Commanding General of Tenth Air Force. General Johnson stated that this show would be the greatest single concentration of Air Power ever to appear in an aerial show. Over 100 American bombers, fighters, cargo planes, helicopters and jets will take part in the exhibitions.

The Air Show will run 30-31 Aug., through 1 Sept. Sunday, 31 Aug., will be "Salute to Navy Day" and Monday, 1 Sept., "Salute to Army Day." On these respective dates Navy and Army personnel will be granted gratis admittance to view the static displays and four hour aerial demonstration.

He commanded squadrons and groups of heavy bombers engaged in supply-dropping operations in Italy in 1944 and 1945.

After his return to the United States, General MacCloskey attended the National War College, graduating in June 1948, and served as chief of the Air Intelligence Policy Division at USAF headquarters for more than a year before being assigned to the air attache post in France.

Gen. Pick Finds Progress At Air Bases "Satisfactory"

Lt. Gen. Lewis A. Pick, Chief of Engineers of the Army, replied this week to a highly critical report of the Senate Preparedness Subcommittee by saying that on his recent visit to the air bases in French Morocco he "found the work progressing at a highly satisfactory rate."

"The jobs are well organized," he said, "and superior quality of work is being accomplished. My determinations were concurred in by the local Air Force commanders."

The Senate Subcommittee, under the chairmanship of Senator Lyndon B. Johnson, (D-Tex.), said that the construction of American air bases in French Morocco has been characterized by "waste, inadequate planning and failure to meet engineering standards."

The committee specifically criticized General Pick, saying that he "did not make the full, frank, and comprehensive statement which Congress and the American people expect from their top officials." The committee also mentioned Col. George T. Derby, who represented the Corps of Engineers on the project and who has since been transferred.

Excerpts from the Committee's conclusions and recommendations follow: "In mitigation, the committee wishes to point out that the district engineer had an inadequate staff and that much of his time was taken up with negotiations with the French and other duties. However, we do not feel that this was an adequate excuse."

"The Chief of the Corps of Engineers, Lt. Gen. Lewis A. Pick, in his testimony before the committee, did not make the full, frank, and comprehensive statement which Congress and the American people expect from their top officials. It is apparent that when he appeared before the committee on 21 February he knew, or in the proper exercise of his authority should have known, of the conditions which prevailed with regard to the construction in Morocco. This evidence tended to show beyond any reasonable doubt that the work in Morocco had not proceeded according to plans and specifications or standard construction practices, and that a serious situation existed. In the committee's opinion, General Pick's testimony tends to create an impression that all was well and that if there had been any deviations from plans and specifications they were of a minor nature and within allowable limits."

"Both the Army and the Corps of Engineers did not give the committee the type of timely and active cooperation which Congress has a right to expect from the military departments."

"The Department of the Air Force for a long period was too lax, especially at the top level, in not following more closely the progress and nature of the construction work being performed for them by the Corps of Engineers. As far as we have been able to determine, it was not until Assistant Secretary Huggins and Mr. Perry took over in January of 1952 that anything of an effective nature was inaugurated by the Air Force. The official in the Air Force responsible for this project should have initiated action to protect its interests and to prevent further squandering of money appropriated for the Air Force."

"The committee concludes also that the mechanics by which the Air Force is kept advised of the progress of such construction work and the use of the money appropriated for it should be improved. At present it is evident that the Air Force has little or nothing to say as to how the funds which it is required to justify before Congress for this type of construction are spent. This is not to say that the Air Force should set up its own construction force. That would be wasteful and duplicative. It is to say, however, that the Air Force should have better liaison with the Corps of Engineers during the progress of such construction."

"The Secretary of the Army should take all necessary steps to assure that the confusion, delay, indecision, and waste which occurred in Morocco is not repeated in the balance of the overseas air-base construction program. Any recurrence of such conditions as prevailed in Morocco would be inexcusable."

"The Secretary of the Army should immediately determine and report to this committee whether the Government has enforceable claims against any persons in connection with the substandard work performed in Morocco. If such is the case, those claims should be enforced quickly and vigorously."

"The Secretary of the Army should determine as soon as possible and report to this committee whether disciplinary action is warranted against any of the military officers involved in this matter. If such action is warranted, it should be implemented at once."

"The Secretaries of the Army, the Air Force and the Navy, in liaison with the Secretary of Defense, should carefully consider whether the so-called 'joint venture' is a proper organization for the performance of military construction, and whether in dealing with this hybrid type of organization the interests of the Government can be fully protected."

"The Secretary of Defense should cause a study to be made as to what additional authority and responsibility should devolve on the Air Force in connection with the planning and construction of air bases and should report his findings to this committee."

"The Secretary of the Army should review carefully the testimony of the Chief of the Corps of Engineers before this committee in the light of his knowledge, at the time, of conditions in Morocco, and take appropriate action."

In his memorandum to the Secretary of the Army, General Pick said:

"I have made another visit to these sites and have completed a review of these tests. I am pleased to inform you that my previous estimate of the situation is confirmed, namely that any need for additional treatment to insure long life and low maintenance cost of the work would be a relatively minor undertaking."

"At the time of my recent visit, all areas were operational—even the much discussed operations apron at Nouasseur is operational to the degree that it is currently being used by all types of MATS aircraft. However, deficiencies do exist which are, in my opinion, the result of the very rapid construction operations conducted during 1951. . . .

"I am pleased with the current operations and the high quality of the paving now being placed. Throughout my inspection I sought the views of General Old and the Air Force base commanders, and they invariably expressed satisfaction with our present work and planned operations. Other operations of the contractor are being carried on in an efficient, business-like manner. There is still too much lag in financing this large undertaking, and as a result, procurement and planning cannot be performed to effect the greatest economy obtainable. Also, the fact that the remaining two sites have not been started and are still under discussion with the French, as to the respective shares of responsibilities of France and the United States, and the provision of additional real estate for the El Djema Sahim site, if not soon resolved will result in restricted operations and will cause demobilization of the contractor's forces beyond the point considered desirable for the effective execution of the remaining work."

"The real test of our defense depends not alone upon our getting the steel into our hands, but more importantly upon the steel of our determination to see the job through, however long it may take."—DEPUTY SECRETARY OF DEFENSE WILLIAM C. FOSTER.

Legislation by Appropriation. The danger of "legislation by amendment" is well exemplified in the first effects of the Davis amendment to the '53 appropriation bill. That amendment, sponsored by Representative Glenn R. Davis (R-Wisc.), set specific percentage limits for the number of officers that could be paid in each commissioned grade. It was adopted on the argument that it was an "anti-brass" provision—that is, that it would curtail the number of flag and general officers—always a popular political argument. It was not correlated with the studies the legislative committees made in adopting the Officer Personnel Act; it was merely brought up and adopted in connection with the appropriations bill. Now the Navy announces that in order to comply with the law it will have to demote some lieutenants to lieutenants junior grade while continuing promotions to top grades. Thus, the result will be exactly opposite to that contemplated by Congress.

Fortunately, relatively few of the legislative amendments offered to the military appropriations bills are adopted. We recall the repeated efforts in the last session to curtail hazard pay and overseas pay and the subsequent decision to refer the problem to the legislative committee for study and report. Nevertheless, the few which are enacted—as witness the Davis amendment—are approved on the basis of broad statements with little or no study and serve only to reinforce the argument that all legislation should go through the legislative committees and not be enacted by "short cut" methods.

Innocent Victims. The Department of Defense, in order to avert a serious loss of morale, would do well in formulating the 1953 legislative program to include a program to safeguard medical care of military dependents. A man's efficiency to the Armed Forces will inevitably suffer if he must go to combat without the assurance that his loved ones will receive proper medical attention. Just two months ago the Senate Committee on Labor and Public Welfare warned that a serious morale problem is in the offing. The Committee urged action to assure adequate medical care of military dependents, but a bill which would accomplish this objective could not be brought to vote prior to adjournment.

Now, with the disclosure that dependent medical care, particularly maternity care, is either being curtailed or eliminated at a number of Service installations, the Pentagon should include remedial legislation in its 1953 program. The health and welfare of the families of fighting men certainly are not matters of "political" debate. Therefore, the Department of Defense need not wait to prepare legislation. When Congress convenes in January, a bill along the lines advocated by the Senate Committee—modified and expanded in line with testimony of Service officials—should be ready for immediate consideration.

Emergency Construction. There are many factors to be taken into account in connection with the Senate report this week charging top Service officials with "confusion, delay, indecision and waste" in the construction of air bases in Morocco. It must be remembered that the establishment of these bases was determined upon just after the outbreak of war in Korea. How far Communist aggression would be carried at that time was not known, but it was realized that if Soviet Russia entered openly in full scale participation, we would be in dire need of some such bases from which to operate our strategic air power effectively. It was, indeed, a "crash" program upon which our very security may have depended if events had taken a certain course.

In fact, the Senate report recognizes the enormity of the task. "The difficulties which confronted our planners were great," the committee stated, " * * Merely to survey the sites required intricate negotiations with the French. These negotiations were beset with many difficulties and complicated problems. Once the sites had been entered, the difficulties multiplied—difficulties with the French authorities; with procurement of materials; with scarcities of workmen; with the

Air Force Promotions

Editor, THE JOURNAL:

Reference "Lt., USN, Views USAF System," 23 Aug. issue, the lieutenant paints a clear picture, as far as he goes, of the Air Force "promotion policy(?)." He seemed alarmed that permanent majors were promoted to colonel. For his information, in January '51 permanent captains were promoted to colonel. They were promoted over not only several thousand permanent lieutenant colonels, not yet full colonels, but also over several thousand permanent majors not yet temporary lieutenant colonels. In 1951, lieutenant colonels with 2½ years in grade were promoted to colonel by passing thousands of lieutenant colonels with six or more years' time-in-grade (had been few promotions since 1945, so most lieutenant colonels had six years). Is it logical that these bright young lads were better than all of the thousands they by-passed?

In view of the quota system to Commands, officers of one Command do not compete against officers from another Command. Sad are the stories of sub-standard officers being promoted to fill the quota while other Commands have more deserving officers. What happened to Centralized Selection?

At one of General Edwards' A-1 meetings at Orlando not too far back, he stated that: "Selection of officers for temporary promotions will be at Department of Air Force level for the following reasons:

"(1) The inequity of 'fortunes of assignment' is minimized.

"(2) Minimizes fawning, servil-ity, and 'apple polishing.'

"(3) Provides a more standardized basis for consideration of all officers.

"(4) Selection is based on the judgment of five or more officers rather than on the judgment of one person.

"(5) Provides opportunity for the development of better selection techniques and methods."

It appears that these are good reasons—still. An excuse given is that the Air Force doesn't have the personnel to make selections in the Pentagon. Question: How does the Navy manage it?

An officer I know applied for a regular commission and didn't make it. He applied for a Regular warrant officer commission and didn't make it. He hasn't been out of the Military District of Washington in years and years. He has been promoted twice (to major and lieutenant colonel) under present policy.

It is noted in THE JOURNAL of 21 June '52, which listed the last batch of promotions, that the preamble to the list contained an explanation and justification of the system used—by the Air Force Personnel Chief. This indicated that he must know that there is much complaint about this system.

EAD for Retired Airmen

Editor, THE JOURNAL:

Recently I applied for a one year's extension of my EAD which expires soon. I was turned down and informed that I would have to sign weather itself. Under these conditions, large-scale, lavish spending may have been impossible to avoid. * * We know that under the best of circumstances, they would represent a substantial bite on our Treasury."

Now, from a calmer perspective, the Committee feels that there were too many errors and too much waste and that someone ought to be castigated because the job was not better done. Under the circumstances and the sense of urgency that then existed, it is going to be extremely difficult to evaluate the entire execution of the program. All concerned readily admit that errors were made that would not have been made under normal peacetime procedures. It should also be noted that in many cases the deficiencies reported have already been corrected and others are in the process of being remedied.

Regardless of the outcome today there is no doubt but that the furor would have been much greater and the search for scalps more intensive if history had taken a different turn and our security jeopardized because operational use of the bases had been delayed by more deliberate, economical and cautious prosecution of the project.

IN THE JOURNAL

10 Years Ago—

All insignia are to be removed from the shoulder loops of officers' shirts and field jackets, the War Department ordered. The removal of such insignia was found desirable because it interferes with gas masks, carbines and other equipment.

50 Years Ago—

In Maryland and West Virginia the Sampson-Schley controversy has already become a direct issue in the campaign for Congress, and the chances are that a similar complication will develop in other states.

85 Years Ago—

It has for many years been found extremely difficult to obtain a sufficient supply of intelligent seamen, either for the Navy or the mercantile marine. This is, of course, mainly due to the fact that the substitution of steam as a motive power has tended to make sea-going men engineers rather than sailors.

an indefinite statement for EAD with a vague promise that if conditions permit I would be permitted to return to my retired status after completion of 24 months active duty.

This policy does not appeal to us retired airmen. Why not let the airman decide whether he wants one, two, or more years of EAD? Hundreds of officers who have 20 or more years service but not quite 30 (now required because of limitation of funds) would like to retire but for two years have been denied retirement because of shortage of funds. Retention of retired airmen who want short periods of EAD would save the government money since they must be paid, active duty or not. It does not make sense somehow. Representative Van Zandt of Pennsylvania has pointed this out to defense officials a number of times.

No Increase for Widows

Editor, THE JOURNAL:

In regard to facts which might be called to the attention of Mr. Kilday, I am writing concerning myself, the widow (68 years of age) of a regular Army officer, who began his service in the ranks and served as an officer in all grades to and including Colonel. He served in the Spanish-American War.

I am wondering if it was an oversight that widows of Spanish-American War Veterans, whose death was in peace time, but service connected, did not get an increase in pension unless they had dependents; or if it was thought that the cost-of-living had not increased for them.

ALONE

Baltimore Sun—Senator Lyndon B. Johnson, D-Tex., "has asked why the Russian army gets along with fewer men on noncombat duty than do our forces. The answer is clear and convincing. In the Russian army the individual is unimportant. In this country we demand a complete record of every soldier. . . . In cases of wounding or death, families must immediately be notified. Graves must be registered. In camp elaborate provision is made for the service man's housing, feeding, clothing and recreation." Few Americans, the paper says, would favor abandoning these practices "and adopting the crude Russian customs."

Dallas Morning News—"Selective Service continues to talk about the deplorable physical and mental state of today's youth. About one third of them are being rejected and Selective Service goes on to say that a higher percentage is being rejected now than at the beginning of World War II. . . . But it is not a matter of declining physical and mental standard among the young men. It is a matter of increased standards."

Cincinnati Post—"If Stalin's heir apparent is to be designated at the forthcoming congress of the Russian Communist party in October . . . it is a reasonable assumption that the nod will be given to a much younger man. And that may not be good," the paper notes, because a young man might be too eager to establish a record which he thinks is the equivalent of that of his predecessors.

Wall Street Journal—"It is simply not true that Communists always tell lies. They have been caught red-handed telling the truth in the new statute for the Soviet Communist Party which will be adopted, it is safe to assume, without dissenting vote when it meets October 5 in Moscow. . . . In the first paragraph of the new regulations for Communist Party members, these words are found: ' . . . The Communist Party of the Soviet Union . . . organized a dictatorship of the proletariat'"

St. Louis Post-Dispatch—"If and when circumstances make possible a reduction of the arms burden, as everybody hopes may happen during the next four years, the question will be how to reach a new balance of the budget and of the economy, without sliding into depression. Staying on the plateau may not be half so neat a trick as getting down without a painful fall."

Boston Daily Globe—Comments on the Air Force announcement that its accident rate is now at an all time low. "This trend towards safety in military aviation is one aspect of the gradual maturity of the whole adventure of human flight. For as its danger ebbs, aviation grows in every day importance."

NATO's Operation MAIN BRACE Begins

A U. S. Naval task force consisting primarily of five carriers sailed at midweek from Hampton Roads, signaling the start of the assembly of vessels to participate in MAIN BRACE exercise in and about the North Sea during 13-25 September. The initial rendezvous will be in United Kingdom waters, from which both the high seas and the amphibious forces will take off for the scheduled exercise.

For the Atlantic Command of the North Atlantic Treaty organization this is a most notable event, its first big maneuver and, naturally, the first exercise in which the two great sections of NATO power are in united operation, with Admiral Lynde D. McCormick as Supreme Allied Commander Atlantic along with his co-equal, General Matthew B. Ridgway as Supreme Allied Commander Europe, in joint command.

It is, therefore, the first testing of SACLANT's staff, which has long been building about a skeleton structure loaned by the Atlantic Fleet—how long is indicated by the little-known fact that it was in an advanced state of preparation (under Admiral William M. Fechter) before General Eisenhower began setting up his own staff at SHAPE. Because of the difficulties of getting NATO acceptance of the SACLANT set-up, the staff was not announced until long afterward.

Now it numbers about 130 officers from the United States, Britain, Canada, France, Netherlands, Norway, and Denmark, with some 25 more to be added during September. With the U. S. Navy supplying much the largest surface and air elements under SACLANT, it is expected that it will supply about two-thirds of the ultimate staff membership, plus the entire enlisted personnel. Admiral McCormick's deputy is Vice-Admiral Sir William Andrews, RN, his chief of staff Rear Adm. Cato D. Glover, Jr., USN. The four principal staff sections are headed by a Canadian officer for Personnel and Administration, a British officer for Intelligence, and Americans for Plans and for Logistics.

The sub-commands are three, the Western Atlantic under Admiral McCormick himself, with a U. S. section under Vice Adm. W. S. Dulany, and a Canadian section divided, in the British Commonwealth manner, between Adm. R. E. S. Bidwell and Air Commander A. D. Ross of the two Canadian services. The Eastern Atlantic, correspondingly, is divided between Admiral Sir George Creasy and Air Marshal Sir Alick Stevens; of its two sub-areas Norlant is under Rear Adm. J. H. F. Crombie and Air Vice Marshal H. T. Lydford; Centlant is under Vice Adm. Sir Maurice J. Mansergh and Air Vice Marshal T. C. Traill (all these being officers of the Royal Navy or the Royal Air Force).

This leaves one sub-area unaccounted for, the Iberio-Atlantic area, which is not yet designated but which it is known will ultimately be placed under an American admiral. But whereas the mid-Atlantic line is already roughly indicated, running from the southern tip of Greenland eastward of the Azores and then due south, the definition between East-Lant and the Iberian command is not yet determined, nor is that between the Iberian command and the Mediterranean area. Apparently Iberio-Atlantic awaits, not a Spanish base settlement, but an agreement about certain other nations' responsibilities in the Mediterranean.

This is not involved in MAIN BRACE, geographically or otherwise. The exercise, it will be remembered, employs the large fleet elements now traveling eastward under Vice Adm. Felix B. Stump (aboard the U.S.S. Wisconsin) as Fleet Commander at sea, and elements from seven other NATO nations (plus New Zealand), as well as land and air forces from SACEUR, the whole exercise in defensive and support tactics being under direction of Adm. Sir Patrick Brind, RN.

Moscow's increasing sensitiveness to "spying" in the Baltic coastal region has again been made clear. It was painfully manifest last year when one of our naval planes was shot down while far from Russian territorial waters; two Swedish planes, likewise over neutral waters and likewise unarmed, were shot down this summer. In the past week three members of the U. S. military mission in Potsdam (Lt. Col. Gerald H. Duin, Capt. Wm. R. Croucher, Pfc. Arnold P. Swenson) were arrested by Soviet authorities for "crossing into a military installation for the purpose of espionage."

They were 100 miles north of Berlin, where their membership in the 10-man mission has hitherto permitted them to be; held for 36 hours, they were questioned not too closely, and the impression of one of them was that this was a typical Muscovite reprisal for the recent brief arrest of a Russian officer in the American zone on a speeding charge. This theory is discouraged, however, by the fact that the Russian command has asked for the recall of all three. The demand will probably be granted, as these particular members, if retained at Potsdam, would hardly be as useful hereafter as will be their replacements.

The nature of the area where they were trespassing will be better understood. (Please turn to Page 1631)

Allied Air Raids Spur Red Propaganda

INCREASING evidence that recent accelerated Allied air attacks on enemy installations in North Korea are seriously hurting the Reds is furnished by the current propaganda of Communist radio broadcasts from Peiping and Pyongyang, denouncing these raids as butchery of non-combatant civilians. The Reds complain that these attacks not only serve no military purpose, but are designed to prolong the war and interfere with peace negotiations.

The Peiping radio has been particularly violent in its denunciation of Allied air attacks on North Korean cities and towns, but at the same time has scoffed at United States military pressure, which it termed a "farce." The bombing attacks on towns in enemy territory were occasioned by the fact that Communist forces have sought to conceal military supply depots and other installations in residential districts. Before attacking them the Allies have warned the people of each locality by leaflet drops and by radio broadcasts to leave the vicinity of designated target areas.

Enemy broadcasts still demand that all Chinese and North Korean Communist prisoners held by the Allies be returned to Red control, irrespective of their personal desires. This uncompromising attitude provides no hope that any progress can be made at the Panmunjom truce conference, which was resumed on Wednesday after a week's recess, and again adjourned for another week. The question of a cessation of hostilities in Korea is much more likely to be resolved at Moscow, where Red Chinese and Soviet leaders are now conferring, than at Panmunjom, where Red delegates are obviously marking time while awaiting the outcome of the top-level talks in progress in Russia. As one indication that the Reds may expect the truce talks to be long drawn-out, the tent that formerly housed the Communist delegation at Panmunjom is being replaced by a permanent building now under construction.

FOREIGN MINISTER CHOU EN LAI, head of the Chinese Communist delegation to Moscow, has been received by Marshal Joseph Stalin, and members of the large staff of the Chinese leader have been holding daily conferences with Soviet military, political and economic officials. While the subjects under discussion have been announced only in vague terms, it seems obvious that future military operations in Korea, and possible further direct and indirect military aid to Communist guerrillas in Indo-China, Malaya and Burma are high on the agenda. Some observers regard the Moscow conference as a possible preliminary to a new peace offensive by the Reds, though by similar reasoning it might be considered as a portent of more aggressive military operations.

A new and absurd accusation of Communist radio propaganda is that many Red prisoners of the Allies on Koje Island have been killed in some unindicated form of "secret experiments." The Peiping radio states that a Chinese soldier held by the Allies escaped and told a wild story of burying victims "murdered by the American side for secret experiments." He told of seeing some 400 graves of Red prisoners. Actually a number of prisoners were killed during riots several months ago, but in recent months only an occasional inmate has been shot while attempting to escape. In the last few weeks there were several minor outbreaks among the Communist prisoners, during which five were killed and 64 injured.

A NEW COMMUNIST PLAN FOR THE INFILTRATION of Afghanistan, Nepal, and the Indian-protected states of Bhutan and Sikkim in the Himalayas is reported from India. According to the reported plan 200,000 Chinese Communist troops would be moved into Tibet, now occupied by a Red division. From Tibet domination of the border states of India would not be difficult, posing a definite threat to the ultimate penetration of India. This report of Red intentions, while regarded as logical, lacks specific authentication.

A new effort at mediation of the long-standing dispute between Iran and Great Britain over the Iranian seizure of British oil properties is being made by Mr. W. Alton Jones, a prominent American industrialist, who is president of the Cities Service Company. Accompanied by four experts in production and refinement of petroleum Mr. Jones went to Iran at the invitation of Prime Minister Mohammed Mossadegh to attempt to work out some satisfactory arrangement for resumption of oil production. His mission is unofficial, and he does not represent the United States government, though the State Department and the American embassy at Teheran are apparently familiar with the project. British officials seem to have been taken by surprise at the news that a leading American oil executive was in Iran for the possible purpose of intervening in the dispute.

United States Ambassador Loy Henderson and British Charge d'Affaires George Middleton called on Premier Mossadegh this week and are reported to have presented a compromise plan to restore vital oil production, which is essential if Iran is to be saved from bankruptcy. The plan is said to include emergency financial aid from the United States, and British concessions on marketing oil now on hand, and use of English technicians in the oil fields. These steps, it is understood, would be preliminary to negotiations concerning compensation for the properties seized.

PRIME MINISTER ALI MAHER, civilian head of the new regime in Egypt announced this week, after a conference with American Ambassador Jefferson Caffrey, that his government had requested new automatic weapons from the United States for the Egyptian police force, and also economic assistance. There were indications that this country may give the Egyptian requests sympathetic consideration, as the new government, though established through a military coup, is regarded as moderate in character, and as more than willing to co-operate with the western powers. The Egyptian premier also stated that he did not contemplate formal negotiations with the British over the status of English troops in the Suez canal zone and sovereignty over the Sudan until domestic problems had been solved, which he thought would take about three months.

The American Air Force this week came to the rescue of some 3,000 stranded Moslem pilgrims seeking to reach the holy cities of Mecca and Medina. The pilgrims from all parts of the Moslem world were held up at Beirut in Lebanon, where their numbers swamped the regular air lines. The Air Force assigned 13 C-54 transports to this unique airlift and moved the devout Mohammedans from Beirut to Jidda, a Saudi Arabian seaport, only 40 miles from Mecca. The unprecedented number of pilgrims this year was due to the recent removal by the Saudi Arabian government of $100 head tax previously levied.

SERVICE NEWS AND GOSSIP

Army Promotion Approach—Secretary of the Army Frank Pace, jr., told the American Legion Convention in New York City this week that the Army will continue to keep its leadership young. He said "the adoption of a special provision that permits promotion of 5 per cent of outstanding officers for special achievement irrespective of time in grade does much to emphasize incentive."

Assistant Secretary Fred Korth recently commented on promotions in an address to the 11th Armored Division Association Convention in Washington, D. C. Mr. Korth, who is responsible for reserve and manpower problems, said:

"A great deal of study is being given to our promotion policies. Because of budgetary ceilings, the Army has been delayed in making many well deserved promotions in both the Regular and Reserve Forces on active duty. It is hoped that within the next few months, we will be able to make these promotions. As stipulated in the Armed Forces Reserve Act, the promotion policy for reserve officers, serving on active duty, will parallel that of the regular establishment. For those who are not on active duty, you will be interested to know that a new reserve promotion system will be instituted for the ORC and the National Guard."

Reduce Obstetrical Care—The report of the closing of the obstetrical service at Fairchild AFB, Wash., (THE JOURNAL, 16 Aug.) is followed now with the disclosure that only 60 obstetrical cases per month will be accepted at Scott AFB, Ill., headquarters of the Air Training Command.

The warning by the Senate Committee on Labor and Public Welfare that thousands of military dependents will be denied adequate medical care is supported by the increasing evidence of curtailed maternity care. The Committee said that only 75,000 of an estimated 200,000 births to wives of enlisted men could be handled in military facilities during the coming year.

At Scott AFB, wives of Army, Navy and Marine Corps personnel had been able heretofore to receive maternity care, but the limitation of facilities and personnel now has forced Air Force officials to limit this service to members of the Scott AFB command on a "first come, first served" basis.

It can be anticipated that the dependent care problem will be raised anew in the 83d Congress, particularly in view of the strong report issued by the Senate Committee. Hasty adjournment of Congress prevented action on legislation which would assure maternity care and other health benefits for military dependents.

General LeMay's Tour—General Hoyt S. Vandenberg, USAF Chief of Staff, returned to duty at the Pentagon on Monday, 25 Aug. At that time, General Nathan F. Twining, who has been Acting Chief of Staff in General Vandenberg's absence since early in May, resumed duties as Vice Chief of Staff.

General Twining, it is recalled, was nominated by the President and confirmed by the Senate, to be Commanding General of the Strategic Air Command. The Senate took action on 28 April, at the same time approving the assignment of General Curtis E. LeMay, SAC commander, as Vice Chief of Staff.

It is of interest to note that General LeMay in October will complete four years of duty as CG of SAC. He was made Commanding General of the U. S. Air Force in Europe in October 1947 and in October 1948 was assigned to command SAC, then at Andrews AFB, Md., but moved one month later to Offutt AFB, Nebr.

There have been no recent indications that the Air Force would soon, if ever, effect the switch in assignments of General Twining and General LeMay. There has been speculation that any action on this shift—tied to it is the fact that General Vandenberg's extended tour as Chief of Staff ends on 30 June 1953—will be held up until after election.

Soviet Expert to PsyWar School—Col. Fillmore K. Mearns, an expert on Russian affairs and the nations of Central and Eastern Asia, has been assigned as Director of the Special Forces Department of the Psychological Warfare School, part of the recently-activated Psychological Warfare Center at Ft. Bragg, N. C.

He was graduated from the U. S. Military Academy in 1938 and has since attended the Artillery School, the Command and General Staff College and the Armed Forces Staff College.

New PMS&T At VMI—Following a tour of duty in Europe, Lt. Col. Henry C. Kerlin, Armor, has been named Professor of Military Science and Tactics at Virginia Military Institute, Lexington, Va. He succeeds Lt. Col. Stuart L. Weinert, Armor, who will attend a refresher course at Ft. Knox, Ky., before leaving for duty in Europe.

Bataan Nurse At Ft. Sill—One of the two Oklahoma nurses who served on Bataan and Corregidor during the grim days following the outbreak of World War II, is now chief of nursing service at Fort Sill. She is Lt. Col. Willa L. Hook, who was flown to Australia from Corregidor on 29 April 1942, just a few days before the embattled fortress surrendered. Colonel Hook has served in a similar capacity at Fort Belvoir, Va., since 1946.

Gen. Parks and Son Win—Second place in the Maryland State Golf Association Father and Son championship, held this week at the Argyle Country Club, Md., went to Maj. Gen. Floyd L. Parks and his son, Billy Parks. General Parks is the Army Chief of Information.

Assigned To ASMRO—Lt. Col. Thomas A. Carilia, MSC, Bronze Star winner during World War II and former Executive Officer of the Army Medical Research Laboratory at Ft. Knox, Ky., has been assigned as Army principal staff member of the Armed Services Medical Regulating Office (ASMRO). Colonel Carilia is a recent graduate of the Army Medical Service Advanced Course at the Medical Field Service School, Ft. Sam Houston, Tex.

New Post For Navy Atomic Chief—Rear Adm. F. S. Withington, Director of the Navy's Atomic Energy Division, will soon be ordered to a new duty assignment. He will be succeeded by Capt. George C. Wright, Chief of Staff and Aide to Commander, Cruisers, Atlantic.

MEMO

To Journal Readers

...Usually reticent to discuss plans for CAPITOL Hill action in advance of Budget Bureau clearance, DefDept. officials are making no effort to camouflage concern over effects of the Davis Amendment restricting promotions. Aim is to assure officers, particularly Reservists contemplating extending tours of duty, that REPEAL OF THE RIDER is definite legislative target. Hardest-hit by the hastily enacted provision is the Air Force, but Navy and Marine Corps promotions also will suffer drastic cutbacks.

...The Preparedness Committee report on air base construction may give new ammunition to advocates of a completely separate engineer set-up for the AF, meaning transfer of many Army building billets. However, the Senate Watchdog group disarms the argument, says strongly that Congress will not tolerate construction duplication.

...Civilian Component leaders are hopeful that the rift between the National Guard Assn. and Reserve Officers Assn., evidenced during final hearings on the RESERVE ACT, will be brought to an end quickly. The new ROA president, Capt. Charles G. Burke, USNR, has been invited to attend a Guard conference at Denver in Oct. Belief is that HARMONY will result; if not, there is apt to be fireworks when Congress reconvenes.

...Coast Guard personnel who have felt DISCRIMINATED AGAINST will be pleased with reports that regulations are being modified to permit their travel on scheduled military aircraft while in a sick or regular leave status. New policy will put Coast Guardsmen on SAME BASIS as other military personnel.

...Army men assigned to ARMOR UNITS are renewing efforts to gain Pentagon approval of a Combat Tanker's Badge, similar to the much-valued Infantryman Combat Badge. Shortly after fighting broke out in Korea, a plan for awarding a badge to front-line armor fighters was discussed at the highest D/A levels (there was even a suggested design), but the idea was shelved. However, with the forthcoming issue of additional adornments to the infantryman's uniform, officers and EM assigned to Armor and Artillery are certain to campaign for added recognition.

Plan New AF Magazine—The growing list of Air Force magazines will be supplemented with publication in mid-December of a publication exclusively for aircraft observers. Planned as a quarterly, the magazine will be titled Aircraft Observer and will have a press run of about 25,000 copies. One copy will be issued to each observer.

Chaplain Leaves Austria After Seven Years—Chaplain (Col.) Roman J. Nuwer, Chief Chaplain of U.S. Forces in Austria, has received orders to return to the U.S. for retirement. He will be replaced by Chaplain (Col.) John White, stationed at the Vienna Military Post.

Chaplain Nuwer, one of the first Americans to enter Vienna, has served more than seven years in Austria. He received a signal honor from Pope Pius XII recently, when the Prelate conferred upon him the rank of Apostolic Protonotary, the highest rank obtainable by a Catholic Priest under the rank of Bishop.

Army WMSC Officer Elected—Maj. Ruth A. Robinson, WMSC, who served as the first military Chief of the Occupational Therapist Section of the Army Women's Medical Specialist Corps, has been chosen vice president of the American Occupational Therapy Association. She is currently serving as Chief of Occupational Therapy at Fitzsimons Army Hospital, Denver, Colo.

Dental Deputy To Retire—Brig. Gen. Neal A. Harper, 5226 39th St. N.W., Washington, D. C., Deputy Chief of the Dental Division, Office of the Army's Surgeon General, will retire on 31 Aug. after more than 35 years service.

General Harper was commissioned a First Lieutenant, Dental Corps on 22 July 1917, three years after his graduation with a degree of Doctor of Dental Science from St. Louis, (Mo.) University.

A member of the American Society of Orthodontists, the Association of Military Surgeons, the Association for the Advancement of Science, the American College of Dentists and the American Dental Association, he has written more than 60 articles for dental, military and scientific publications.

General Harper holds degrees as Bachelor of Laws, Master of Laws and Master of Patent Laws; Bachelor of Arts and Master of Science all from National University. General and Mrs. Harper will reside at Lake George, N. Y., following his retirement.

spirit of enthusiasm and team-work displayed by personnel engaged in the job. Other Federal agencies such as the General Services Administration, the Civil Service Commission and the Post Office Department rendered invaluable assistance in the early days of activation. Personnel recruitment and training, the development of procedures, the procurement of supplies and equipment and a myriad of other administrative details attendant to activation had to be geared to the pace of the modification and the various elements moved into their new quarters as space became available.

Separate Air Command

The Air Force Finance Center operates under the broad policy supervision and direction of the Director of Finance, Deputy Chief of Staff, Comptroller, Headquarters, United States Air Force. It is, in effect, an extension of that office. It has been officially designated as a separate operating agency for other than technical matters and functions as a separate Air Command. The Commanding General of the Center normally serves in the capacity of Deputy Director of Finance for the Air Force, thus giving to administrative interpretations, directives and regulations issued by the Center, the authority of the Chief of Staff, Headquarters, United States Air Force. The Commanding General, the Deputy Commander and the Chief of Staff are supported by a staff consisting of four Deputy Chiefs of Staff in the areas of personnel, materiel, operations and comptrollership, a civilian special assistant who is an advisor on technical matters, a Staff Judge Advocate, an Inspector General and an Air Adjutant General.

The Finance Center is divided into several divisions, the largest of which is the Allotment Division. To the men and women of the Air Force and their dependents scattered as they are over the globe, the Center and specifically this Division, represents financial security in the form of the monthly allotment check. Some 700,000 checks aggregating a disbursement of fifty million dollars are written and mailed each month. This Division administers the allotment accounts of all Air Force military personnel throughout the world. The Division is currently maintaining almost 850,000 accounts. Of these 400,000 are Class E allotments, which are voluntary allotments paid to individuals or agencies at the request of the allottee, and 300,000 are Class Q allotments, which are paid to dependents of airmen. There are an additional 150,000 accounts representing National Service and United States Government life insurance policy premiums paid by allotment, in settlement of which the Center makes a monthly remittance to the Veterans Administration.

Reduce Workload

To reduce the workload into manageable proportions, the Allotment Division is broken down into five identical branches, which bear the unusual designations of 01, 23, 45, 67 and 89. All of the Allotment accounts are segregated in accordance with the terminal digit of the service number of the officer or airman, and these numerical designations indicate the allotment accounts which are maintained by each Branch. This method of handling the allotment accounts makes possible an even distribution of the workload of the Division and combines in one place all the allotment accounts of any one individual, thereby facilitating the handling of inquiries, changes and discontinuances. A more important advantage of this system, however, is its extreme flexibility in the event of any major expansion of the Air Force.

The Central Disbursing Division, which writes and dispatches the allotment checks, is also organized on the terminal digit basis. The checks are written mechanically from punched cards and are produced at the rate of 30,000 per hour during the check-writing period which usually lasts from three to four days. In addition to writing all allotment checks, this Division also pays all housekeeping expenses of the Center, including military and civilian pay, travel pay and commercial bills.

The Military Pay Division has the responsibility for auditing all military pay records. Twice each year, on 30 June and 31 December, the pay records of all military personnel are closed out by the field finance officers and forwarded to the Finance Center where they are subjected to a careful examination. As a part of the audit, the mathematical accuracy of the entries on the pay records are verified by electronic calculation. In addition to the audit, certain information is extracted mathematically from the records and used in the preparation of accounting and budgetary reports. This Division also maintains the Airmen's Deposit Accounts.

Primary Function

The primary function of the Accounting Division is to account for the expenditure and collection of all Air Force funds. Through its "funding" service, it provides approximately nine hundred million dollars monthly to the official accounts of field finance officers and receives, in turn, vouchers supporting the expenditure of such funds. Vital information from the vouchers is recorded on punched cards, from which roughly 1,500 reports of an accounting nature are rendered monthly.

The Settlements Division processes all claims for and against the Federal Government arising out of the Air Force activities and has other miscellaneous but important seat-of-the-Government functions. For example, it pays the six-months death gratuity for all Air Force personnel who die or are killed outside the Continental United States, and administers the provisions of law relating to persons missing in action or prisoners of war and those who have become mentally incompetent.

Big Business

The Air Force Finance Center is big business. To carry out its mission, at a minimum cost to the taxpayer, the Center from its inception has attempted to apply basic management principles and concepts. Staffing is based on a continuous program of work measurement, whereby the performance standards are established for each measurable job and applied to projected workloads to arrive at personnel requirements. Methods and procedures used at the Center are under constant scrutiny by methods analysts seeking to find the best way to accomplish each process and to eliminate bottlenecks, duplications and backtracking. Maximum use is made of labor-saving devices, and many of the major processes are mechanized. The emphasis on mechanization has resulted in one of the largest concentrations of electrical accounting machines in any military or civilian installation. Checks are written and sealed by special equipment and many other types of office equipment are used to reduce manpower requirements and save money. Programs of management improvement have been established in the areas of training, manpower utilization, equipment utilization, work simplification, space utilization, forms management, report control, records administration and cost control.

The Air Force Finance Center has already proved itself as an invaluable member of the Air Force team. It is a big business run like a big business with the accent on efficiency and economy and a keen sense of cost consciousness instilled in its personnel. The Center stands prepared to assume its full share of the Air Force's responsibilities as may be dictated by world events in the future.

Obituaries

Elizabeth Eileen Canine

Elizabeth Eileen (Josan) Canine, five-and-a-half-year-old daughter of Maj. and Mrs. Chester E. Canine, died at Walter Reed Army Hospital, Washington, D. C., on 19 Aug.

The presence of the Wilms tumor, a child's cancerous disease of the kidney, was discovered last March when extensive X-ray therapy treatments and subsequent surgery temporarily deterred the disease during the following five months, allowing the little girl's continued enjoyment of her home and playmates. This period was followed, however, by a rapid decline in five days, which ended with her passing on the morning of 19 August.

The funeral services, conducted by the Reverend A. W. Powell, pastor of the Reorganized Church of Latter Day Saints of Washington, were held at the Ft. Myer Chapel, with interment at Arlington National Cemetery on 21 August.

Mrs. Marjorie A. Calnan

The body of Mrs. Marjorie Ackerman Calnan, 29, who died in an Army hospital at Yokohama, Japan, 21 Aug. after a 10 days illness, will be returned to her native home in Albany, N. Y., for burial.

Mrs. Calnan, wife of 1st Lt. Francis M. Calnan, aide-de-camp of Maj. Gen. Thomas L. Harrold in Japan, formerly served on the nursing staffs of the Albany Hospital and the famed Memorial Hospital in New York City. She arrived in Japan in May to join her husband after his return from combat in Korea with the 1st Cavalry Division. After living in northern Japan for several weeks, she moved to Yokohama when her husband was transferred there to join the Japan Logistical Command.

Mrs. Calnan graduate from Albany Academy and completed nurse training at the Albany Hospital. During World War II, she served as a nurse in the Navy and following close of hostilities moved to New York to join the staff of the Memorial Hospital. She and Lieutenant Calnan were married in September 1950, and made their home at 12 West 95th St., New York City.

Surviving are her husband and her parents, Mr. and Mrs. G. Frank Ackerman, 596 Warren St., Albany, her mother-in-law, Mrs. Mary Ramsay Heron, 235 Parkside Drive, Roslyn Heights, Long Island; and her father-in-law, Michael Francis Ramsay of Washington, former president and chairman of the board of Liberty National Bank of that city.

John F. Nagel

John F. Nagel, 18, son of Col. Jacob L. Nagel, FC, Hq XVIII Airborne Corps, Ft. Bragg, N. C., and Mrs. Nagel, died at Valley Forge Army Hospital at Phoenixville, Pa., on 8 Aug., after a long illness.

Combat Pay

titled to such pay, a member of the military services must have been subjected to hostile fire for not less than six days during the month for which he is paid while serving with a combat unit of regimental size or smaller, or in a vessel or aircraft. However, if a member of the armed forces was subject to hostile fire for six consecutive days beginning in one month, but ending during the next month, he is entitled to combat pay for the latter month, provided he was not entitled to combat pay during the former month.

If a member of the armed forces received incentive or special pay for aviation, submarine, parachute, medical or dental duty, etc., during a month, he is not entitled to combat pay for that month.

A member or former member of the uniformed services is entitled to combat pay for each month beginning after 31 May 1952 in which:

- (1) He was killed in action while serving as a member of a combat unit in Korea; or
- (2) He was injured in action or wounded in action while serving as a member of a combat unit in Korea. In this case he is also entitled to combat pay for not more than three months after his injury or wound while he is hospitalized for treatment of a wound or injury received in action; or
- (3) He was captured or entered a missing-in-action status while serving as a member of a combat unit in Korea, and for not more than three months thereafter during which he occupies such status.

"Member" when used in relation to a combat unit is defined as any member of the uniformed services serving and present with, or on board, such unit under competent orders, including verbal orders.

"Combat unit" is defined as:

- (1) Any military unit (not larger than a regiment), while such unit is engaged in actual combat on land; or
- (2) Any element of, or detail of personnel from, any military unit (not larger than a regiment), while such element or detail is subjected to hostile ground fire in the course of rendering aid or assistance directly to a military unit, not larger than a battalion, which is engaged in actual combat on land, or by fire to any military unit engaged in actual combat on land; or
- (3) Any military unit (not larger than a regiment) engaged in any amphibious or airborne operation while subjected to hostile ground fire in the course of rendering aid or assistance, to a military unit which is engaged in actual combat on land, by the performance of duties which require its employment at or near a beach or airhead; or
- (4) Any vessel while subjected to hostile fire or explosion in the course of any operation; or
- (5) Any aircraft while subjected to hostile fire in the course of any operation.

"Actual combat on land" means direct contact with and opposition to a hostile force by any military unit while such unit is subjected to hostile ground fire. Combat units will be designated monthly in general orders issued by commands; but the military services will designate those units which qualified as combat units after 31 May 1950, but prior to 1 July 1952.

The final determination of fact with respect to periods of qualification for combat pay of an individual member of the uniformed services will be made by the military services at Washington, if the case is submitted for such determination.

Commanding officers or personnel officers with subordinate units or commands may make determinations of fact with respect to period of qualification for members assigned or attached to the extent that the periods can be verified from records in their possession;

Build Patrol Gunboats

Award of contracts for construction of five PGM's (Patrol Gunboats, Motor) was announced this week by Rear Adm. Homer N. Wallin, Chief of the Navy Bureau of Ships.

The boats will be built by the MacDonell Boat Works, St. Marys, Ga. Unit price per vessel will be $171,222.

The PGM's are 110-foot, wooden vessels powered by diesel engines. Their armament consists of four 50-caliber twin-mount machine guns, two 40mm single-mount machine guns and one 60mm mortar. They are used for patrolling harbors and shorelines and strafing hostile troops sighted near shore.

Directs Aero Mfg.

John R. Lenox, for the last three years manager of personnel and industrial relations at Minneapolis-Honeywell Regulator Company, has been appointed director of aero manufacturing, it is announced by M. P. Fedders, the firm's manager of aeronautical operations.

During the war Mr. Lenox was general foreman of an ordnance plant operated by the company to make fire control equipment.

Wing Commander Visits

Capt. J. I. Taylor, Commander Fleet Logistic Air Wing, and Officers of Air Transport Squadron One recently visited at the Lockheed Aircraft Corporation, Burbank, Calif., where they observed the turbo-prop engine installation, flight station mock-up, and progress of squadron personnel undergoing training for the R7V Super Constellation.

Personnel in the military services who wish to appeal a determination of fact regarding their qualifications may submit a statement, giving the basis of his appeal and such evidence or information as he has to support it, to his commanding officer. This statement, accompanied by a claim form, will be considered by the commanding officer with any available additional information and records.

If the appeal is from a determination of fact by the Bureau of Naval Personnel, the Air Adjutant General, or the Adjutant General of the Army, the statement, claim form, and records will be submitted by the commanding officer to that office for review.

If the determination of fact which is appealed was made by the commanding officer and on reconsideration, he determines that the man was qualified he certifies such fact. If, however, the commanding officer rules otherwise, the statement, claim form, and all other records and information are submitted to the Adjutant General of the Army, the Air Adjutant General or the Bureau of Naval Personnel whichever is appropriate, for final determination.

Former members of the uniformed services or their survivors may submit their claim on Form DD 667 (Claim for Combat Pay) which will be available through local post offices on or after 15 September. Claims should not be filed until these forms are available.

Because of the difficulty and time-consuming task involved in the examination of combat records covering a period of two years, delays in settlement of combat pay claims for periods prior to 1 July 1952, may be expected.

Faster Aerial Camera

Developed For Navy Jets

Development of a new high-speed aerial camera designated as the CAX-12 for use on jet photo reconnaissance planes has been announced by the Navy.

Although less than one-fourth the size of present aerial cameras, the camera has a faster cycling quality which will enable photo pilots to sweep in, get their pictures, and fly out of anti-aircraft range much more quickly than with present cameras.

Developed by the Fairchild Camera and Instrument Co. of Jamaica, Long Island, N. Y., to Navy Bureau of Aeronautics specifications, the new camera is expected to fulfill the Navy's requirements for an efficient camera small enough to fit in the slim fuselages of the jet planes of tomorrow.

The camera is designed to map territory while the plane is traveling at very low and very high altitudes and at ground speeds ranging from 175 knots to near sonic speeds.

Using 70mm rolls of film with sprocket holes along both sides, it takes 100 feet of film in its removable magazines. Minus controls and mount, it weighs only 15 pounds with the smallest lens. The small-size film it uses is less expensive than the film now being used in aerial cameras and is expected to result in substantial savings.

Two film magazines can be put in it, one with the film stationary for mapping unknown areas and one with moving film for low level high speed reconnaissance photography. Four different lens cones are provided with the camera which permit large or small scale photography from any aptitude desired.

Now in quantity production, the new camera "is earmarked for use in newer, faster photo planes not yet delivered to the fleet," the Navy said.

Named Retired Adms.

Three retired Navy admirals recently have been named to important jobs in industry:

Admiral Harold B. Sallada, USN-Ret., former Chief of the Bureau of Aeronautics, was appointed to an executive post with the Chance Vought Aircraft Division of United Aircraft Corporation in Dallas, Tex. He will be concerned with operational phases of twin-jet fighter plane production for the Navy. Previously, Admiral Sallada was manager of the Chicago plant of the Fairchild Engine and Airplane Corporation.

Rear Adm. A. G. Noble, USN-Ret., was elected executive vice-president, a member of the executive committee and of the board of directors of the Nordberg Manufacturing Company in Milwaukee, Wisc. Previously, he was vice president and general manager of the Martin-Parry Corporation of Toledo, Ohio.

Rear Adm. S. F. Patten, USN-Ret., was elected a director of Allen B. DuMont Laboratories, Inc. He has been with the firm since his retirement in 1947, going to DuMont as assistant to the president. He was elected vice president last October.

Gen. Busch Joins Firm

Brig. Gen. Everett Busch, commandant of the Quartermaster School at Ft. Lee, Va., for 10 months, will retire 31 Aug. after 35 years of military service. He has accepted a position with the J. Henry Helsel Company, an investment management firm in San Francisco.

Three Services Order Ram-Jet Helicopters For Tests

The Army, Navy and Marine Corps have ordered five two-place, ram-jet helicopters—called the Hornet—from Hiller Helicopters of Palo Alto, Calif.

A Department of Defense announcement said nothing about Air Force plans to test the new-type helicopter, which is powered by a small ram-jet engine mounted on the tip of each of two 23-foot rotor blades.

The Army and Navy have each ordered two Hornets. The Marine Corps has ordered one. The Navy Bureau of Aeronautics is the contracting agent.

Designated the HJ-1, the Hiller-Hornet has only two hand controls and no foot controls. Weighing approximately 360 pounds empty, it can carry a useful load of 600 pounds and has a maximum forward speed of 80 miles per hour.

The Hiller-Hornet's twin jet engines weigh only 12 pounds each and have no moving parts whatsoever. Disassembly of the engines from the rotor blades may be accomplished in just a few minutes with a screwdriver.

The engines will burn almost any type of low-cost fuel, including lower grades of gasoline, kerosene, or diesel fuel oil, and each develops approximately 35 horsepower for a total power output of 70 horsepower.

Hiller Helicopters began development of the Hiller-Hornet four years ago. Several models have flown extensively for the past two years. In hundreds of test flights conducted by the company, the Hornet has made numerous "power-off" landings from altitudes up to 3,000 feet.

Scheduled for delivery before June of 1953, the Hornets will be service evaluated by the Navy at the Naval Air Test Center, Patuxent River, Md.; by the Marine Corps at Quantico, Va.; and by the Army at Ft. Bragg, N. C.

Defense Dept. Names First Installations Director

Appointment of Frank R. Creedon as Director of Installations in the Office of the Secretary of Defense is announced by Secretary of Defense Robert A. Lovett.

Mr. Creedon comes to the Department of Defense from the National Production Authority, where he was Assistant Administrator in charge of facilities and construction. He was General Manager in charge of construction of the Atomic Bomb Plant at Oak Ridge, Tenn., in 1944 and 1945, for which he was awarded the Medal of Merit, the highest award a civilian can receive for services to his country.

Mr. Creedon's appointment as Director of Installations for the Department of Defense, was made under a provision of Public Law 534, directing the establishment of that office to maintain surveillance for the Secretary of Defense over the planning and construction by its military departments of all public works projects.

Public Law 534 (Sec. 408) provides that the Director of Installations shall be a civilian appointed by and directly responsible to the Secretary of Defense.

The duties of the office include the making, from time to time, of reports to the Secretary of Defense "with respect to public works projects under construction by the military departments as he may deem necessary to keep the Secretary of Defense currently and fully informed with respect to the status, progress, and cost of, and all other pertinent matters concerning, such public works project."

stood later on; the impressive fact is that thus far from the Baltic coast, now bristling with defenses, the Russians are sensitive about sightseeing. This is the first time since the setting up of the four powers' missions in 1945 that any member from any national group has been arrested save briefly for the purpose of identification.

The Spanish-American negotiations with regard to base-construction and other matters, which seemed a week ago to have reached an impasse, now have been renewed on a much better basis. As suggested at that time, some of the Spanish principals had developed the idea that they were enjoying a seller's market, and that America was so eager to "buy" that Spain could exact exceedingly stiff terms. Precisely what took place is not officially revealed; but last Saturday (according to a newspaper dispatch which indicated State Department encouragement) the American negotiators in Madrid were instructed to turn down five Spanish demands without further discussion. And on Monday another newspaper dispatch from Madrid suddenly reported a changed attitude; Spain now desires to reach a reasonable compromise.

The latter dispatch records also an altered attitude on the part of Spanish publications (which under the dictatorship are an index to official thinking). They have been extremely critical of American institutions and American personalities, but a turn of expression is anticipated from an authoritative article in the Falangist Arriba, which hopes for "a new phase in United States-Spanish relations." The fact is that Spain has a great deal to gain from an arrangement, and knows it.

The fullness of Yugoslav overtures to Greece is suggested by the fact that Athens this past week has circulated a rumor that Yugoslav "elements" (this may mean little more than observers) are likely to attend the Greek and Turkish land maneuvers of late autumn. Certainly relations among these three important nations are improving, as Secretary of the Army Frank Pace, jr., observed during his recent brief, but distinctly friendly conversations in the Balkans. A parliamentary mission from Yugoslavia has already reached Athens and a military mission will follow in the coming week. Spokesmen for each of the three nations have referred pointedly in published remarks to their interest in a common defense. NATO's new Southeast Europe command has been designated in timely manner.

Commands PH Sub Base

The Pearl Harbor Submarine Base came under new command on 23 Aug., when Capt. Donald F. Weiss, USN, replaced Captain Joseph W. Williams, jr.

Captain Weiss, a graduate of the U. S. Naval Academy with the Class of 1929, has been a submariner since 1931. He has served aboard six submarines: S-42, S-43, S-45, R-10, R-13 and Tinosa. He has also seen service aboard the cruiser Concord and the battleships Utah and Arizona.

Captain Williams will take command of the submarine tender USS Sperry, now skippered by Capt. D. T. Hammond, USN. The Sperry is undergoing a two-month overhaul at the Pearl Harbor Naval Shipyard before returning to San Diego, where she serves as a floating base for West Coast-based submarines. A 1933 Naval Academy graduate, Captain Williams made eight World War II patrols aboard submarines in the Pacific.

CHESTERFIELD

FIRST PREMIUM

QUALITY CIGARETTE

TO OFFER BOTH REGULAR & KING-SIZE

BOTH regular and king-size Chesterfields are premium quality cigarettes and come in the smart white pack.

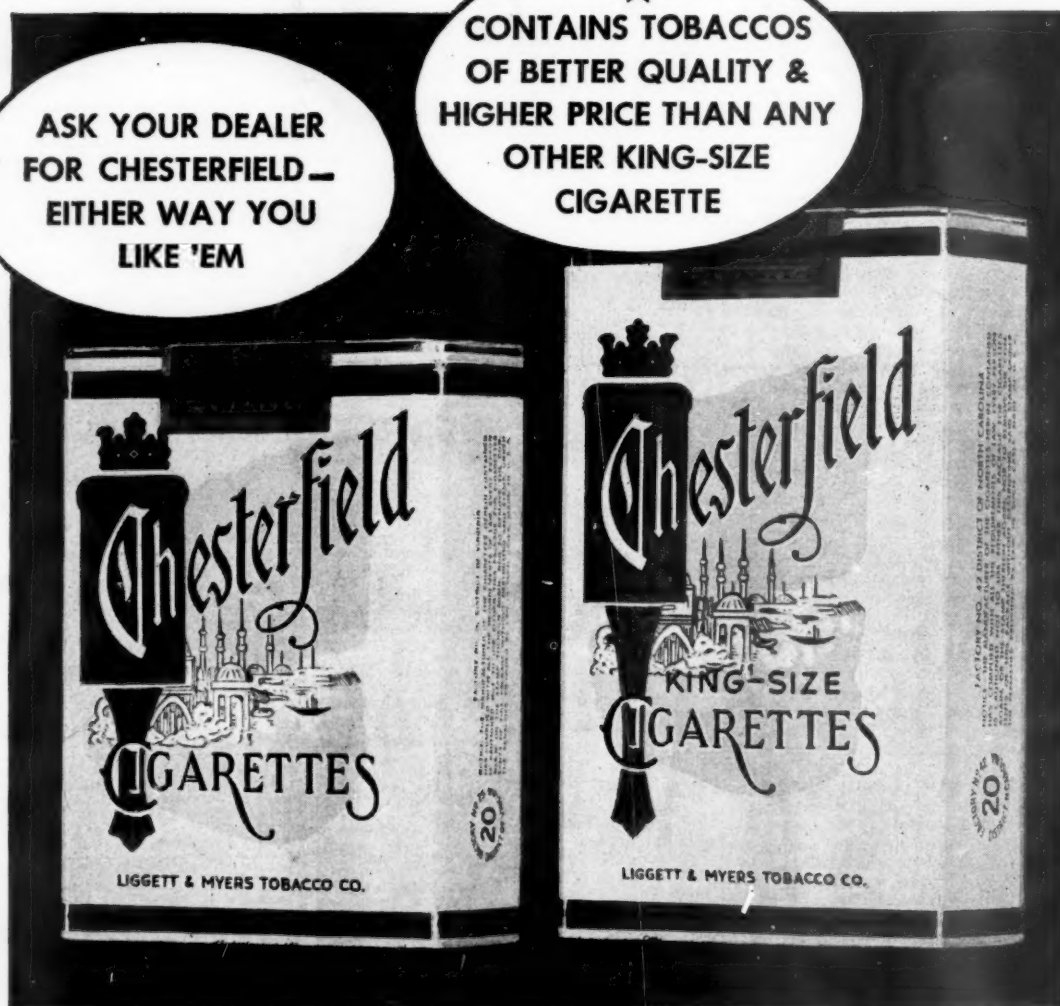

BOTH contain only those proven ingredients that make Chesterfield the best possible smoke: the world's best tobaccos, pure, more costly moistening agents (to keep them tasty and fresh), the best cigarette paper that money can buy—nothing else.

BOTH are much milder with an extraordinarily good taste and, from the report of a well-known research organization — no unpleasant after-taste.

BOTH are exactly the same in all respects. There is absolutely no difference except that king-size Chesterfield is larger — contains considerably more of the same tobaccos — enough more to give you a 21% longer smoke, yet costs little more.
